GOV. COX MAY CHANGE NOTIFICATION PLANS

Dayton, Ohio, July 24.—A change in the place for notification of Governor Cox of his nomination for the presidency by the democrats was taken up today by the governor with local interests. The event may be transferred from the city of Dayton to the edge of the city. Facilities for the crowds expected August 7 for the notification ceremonies were the moving factors in the proposed change.

The fair grounds, besides a grandstand seating several thousand in addition to a large race course, has street car service, lacking at Dayton. The governor also doubts whether the natural amphitheater at Dayton's End, where he had planned to deliver his address, would enable all visitors to hear him.

The notification ceremonies are in the hands of the democratic national committee, but a local arrangements committee is to act, and after further conferences with Governor Cox, definite announcement is expected early next week.

Conferences Not Concluded.
The governor today was unable to conclude conferences with party leaders on campaign affairs, but subject to occasional arrivals, will begin work next Monday on his acceptance address. Among Traill's End callers today were Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago, former chairman of the United States shipping board; Senator Beckham, of Kentucky; Henry L. Deberry, of New York, public utility and oil operator; and E. D. Hulbert, president of the Merchants Loan and Trust company, of Chicago.

Shipping and industrial affairs, Governor Cox said, were discussed with Mr. Hurley, who was accompanied by Mr. Hulbert. Data for the campaign, the governor said, had been secured from Mr. Hurley, who also told him that the democratic situation in Illinois had improved greatly since the San Francisco nominations. The call of Mr. Hulbert, who also told him that the democratic situation in Illinois had improved greatly since the San Francisco nominations. The call of Mr. Hulbert, who with Mr. Hurley, spent most of the day at Traill's End, was said to have been social.

Favorable reports on conditions in Kentucky were also received by the governor from Senator Beckham, who said:

"I told the governor that a sweeping victory in Kentucky was assured. He promised to make several speeches in the state during the campaign."

Only One Western Trip.

Governor Cox said he was considering his itinerary frequently, and that it now appeared probable that he would make only one western trip, spending most of September in that territory, after touring the central and eastern states during August, while Franklin D. Roosevelt, the vice presidential candidate, is in the west. The governor stated that in October he probably would deliver some addresses in southern states, and the remainder in the central and eastern territory. He said he plans little personal work in Ohio. In between his visitors today Governor Cox went "back to the soil" for a few hours, looking over live stock and other interests on his farm, which he has been compelled to neglect almost since his nomination. He got much rest as well in relaxation from the round of work at Columbus, and tomorrow plans to spend the day quietly, attending church and resting at home. He also was expecting visits with Senator Fournier, of Ohio, and James W. Gerrard, of New York, former ambassador to Germany.

appointed at the conference held in the governor's office at the capital last Wednesday and which, it is believed, will save the governor next year from embarrassment in the payment of appropriations when they are due, caused by casual deficiencies in the treasury.

The bill is in the nature of an amendment to the constitution which will extend the governor's temporary borrowing power so as to enable him to meet any emergency that can be met by the revenue anticipated for any current year.

The suggestion was made by Secretary of State S. Guyt McLeod at the Thursday conference in the very able historical resume of the casual deficiency situation which he presented in writing. He showed that in 1877, when the constitution was adopted, $200,000 temporary borrowing power was ample to tide the governor over casual deficiencies until the revenue many times less than it is now, could be collected. Later, with the expanding revenue, it was found necessary, in 1894, to amend the constitution so that the governor could borrow $500,000 in any one year. With the changing conditions, this sum is again found to be altogether inadequate. The bill which, it is understood, the committee, composed of Governor Dorsey, Chairman Carwell and Chairman Ivan E. Allen, of the senate finance committee, will present, will make the constitution go elastic as to take care of any casual deficiencies that may arise in the future.

It will enable the governor to borrow from time to time any amount that may be needed for each year within the anticipated revenue certified to him by the comptroller general. If passed at this session and ratified by the people at the general election this fall, it will go into effect in time to save the school fund loan next spring. This is considered important, as doubts have been raised as to the constitutionality of the present system of discounting school warrants.

The bill will be strongly supported and every effort made to get it through in the remaining days of the session.

Compensation for Workmen.
The biggest feature of last week in legislative progress was undoubtedly the passage by the senate of the workmen's compensation bill of Senator Bowden of the fifth. This bill was passed without a dissenting vote in the senate. An identical bill was introduced in the house by Mr. McDonald of Richmond and has already been unanimously favorably reported by the committee on labor and labor statistics of that body. An effort will be made to put the senate bill carrying the many of both authors on its passage in the house at an early date.

These bills are not the same as the bills introduced by the identical authors last year. The introduction at that time was for the purpose of getting the measures on the calendar early. The present bills are substitutes proposed by the authors and adopted in committee. They have received the hearty approval of both the labor and the manufacturers' organizations, have been endorsed by insurance men experienced in insuring manufacturers against injuries to workmen and probably the best of their kind and have also received the endorsement of Commissioner of Commerce and Labor Hal Stanley. They embody features of the best laws in the union, including the Ohio workmen's compensation act, which was one of the great constructive measures of the great democratic governor, James M. Cox.

All but six of the states in the union have now in operation workmen's compensation acts. The dilatory states, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi and Arkansas, are all located in the south.

Another bill embodying many of the features of another of Governor Cox's famous reconstruction measures, which is scheduled to come up for passage in the senate this week, is the securities commissioner bill, otherwise known as the "blue sky bill." It was unanimously reported by the senate general judiciary committee some time ago and Senator Dorsey in his office Monday afternoon.

So important is this measure considered by Governor Cox that he sent a special message to the Ohio legislature on July 13, 1914. The Ohio law has been upheld by the supreme court of the United States in a unanimous decision after one of the greatest legal battles in recent years. It has since met with the unqualified approval of all the honest business interests in Ohio.

Victory for G. N. & L. College.
The victory of the G. N. & L. college in the senate Friday when a bill was passed giving the local trustees, president and faculty, the exclusive right to base on the admission of girls to the institution was not unexpected. The measure was known favor in which the institution stands with this legislature.

It was rather surprising, however, that the body turned down the amendment of Senator Ayers giving preference to the girls since it is a matter of history that the institution was founded chiefly through the efforts of the late Governor W. Y. Atkinson in 1889 to provide a state institution where the daughters of poor parents might be able to secure an education at small cost. Senator Ennis of Milldegeville spoke against the Ayers amendment.

The repeal of the Barnes time bill by the house was a foregone conclusion, since it was proposed by the author. The passing of this measure will cause no regret except to the humorous paragraphs of the newspapers.

The house next Wednesday will settle at last the Knight resolution for county distribution of the highway fund, about which such a hot fight has been waged this session. It appears that the outcome of the debate and entirely good-natured little filibuster of Thursday afternoon, which prolonged until nearly 11 o'clock the sessions of the house, will be the getting together of all of the friends of highway legislation and the passage of the Knight resolution in its present very much amended form almost unanimously, with the understanding all around that the senate constitutional amendment for bonds shall be put on its passage and passed immediately thereafter. The authorization of bonds this fall will smooth the way for the great highway construction program inaugurated by the present general assembly, and it is believed that with it will soon pass away all of the strife and animosities that have been aroused in connection with the distribution of the fund, notwithstanding the latest effort of Commissioner J. O. Gascon, of Butte county, to appeal to county commissioners of other counties in order to fight the validity of the highway act, as construed by Attorney General Clifford Walker in the courts.

Salary Increases.
In connection with this latest development and in reply to the charge that the governor intentionally overruled the last expression of the legislature will by the order in which he signed the highway and motor vehicle acts, it was conclusively shown by Judge Quincy, of Coffee, in the debate on the house floor Thursday that both of these measures came to the governor from the senate on the same day at the tag end of the session, and that neither could be considered to have precedence over the other.

While bills have been introduced to raise other salaries, members of the legislature as well as candidates for the office of attorney general appear to have overlooked the fact that the salary of that office, under the construction put upon the act by former Attorney General Walker still remains at $2,000 per year. It will be an anomaly, if the bill to increase the salaries of clerks of the review court judges passes, that these will then be receiving a salary equal to that of the attorney general.

No criticism is made of the bill to increase these latter salaries, who are certainly too low at $2,000 per year, but it is rather surprising that no member has proposed a bill to increase the attorney general's salary, which failed to receive the constitutional two-thirds majority on its passage last year. While most lawyers would doubtless hold that under the recent decision of the supreme court on the motor vehicle act, the attorney general's bill was constitutionally passed, it would interest himself in putting the bill through this year with a constitutional vote.

MASKED BANDIT ROBS FOUR AUTO STAGES

Fresno, Calif., July 24.—A masked bandit robbed four automobile stages en route to Yosemite National park today and obtained $250 in money, according to a special dispatch to the Fresno Republican from Merced, Calif.

The bandit wore a white handkerchief for a mask, stood on a bank overlooking the road and at the point of a rifle compelled one of the stage passengers to alight and pass a hat among the other passengers. Each was ordered to empty his pockets. The robber tearing cars following the stage were not molested.

The scene of the holdup was in the mountains, a short distance outside the park boundaries and about 35 miles from Yosemite postoffice.

NEGRO SOLDIER TO DIE FOR KILLING MOTORMAN

Montgomery, Ala., July 24.—By unanimous vote of the state body of pardons today the petition of Sergeant Edgar C. Caldwell, negro, for commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment, was denied. The papers went to the governor, who is asked to disregard the ruling of the board. Caldwell, army sergeant of Chicago, killed Cecil Linton, Anniston street car motorman, during the war.

This case went before the United States supreme court, which tribunal refused to review the case.

"Can't Cut Off My Leg"

Says Railroad Engineer

"I am a railroad engineer; about 20 years ago my leg was seriously injured in an accident out West. Upon my refusing to allow the doctor to amputate it I was told it would be impossible to do so. I have tried all kinds of salves and had many doctors in the last 20 years, but to no avail. Finally I resolved to use PETERSON'S OINTMENT on my leg. You cannot imagine my astonishment when I found it was doing what over 100 things had failed to do. My leg is now completely cured. My leg is 759 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. 'Not only do I guarantee Peterson's Ointment for old sores and wounds, but for eczema, salt rheum, ulcers, chafing, itching skin and blind bleeding, or itching piles, and I put up a big box for 60 cents at all drug stores, a price all can afford to pay and money back if not satisfied.' Mail order filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. Jacobs' Drug Stores will supply you.—(adv.)"

It has been estimated that Oregon's 450,000,000,000 worth of standing timber is worth $100,000,000 and would make $10,000,000,000 worth of lumber. About 4,000,000 acres of timber land in that state has been needlessly destroyed by fire.

CALOMEL

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury—quicksilver; and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work.

INSTEAD, TAKE
"Dodson's Liver-Tone"

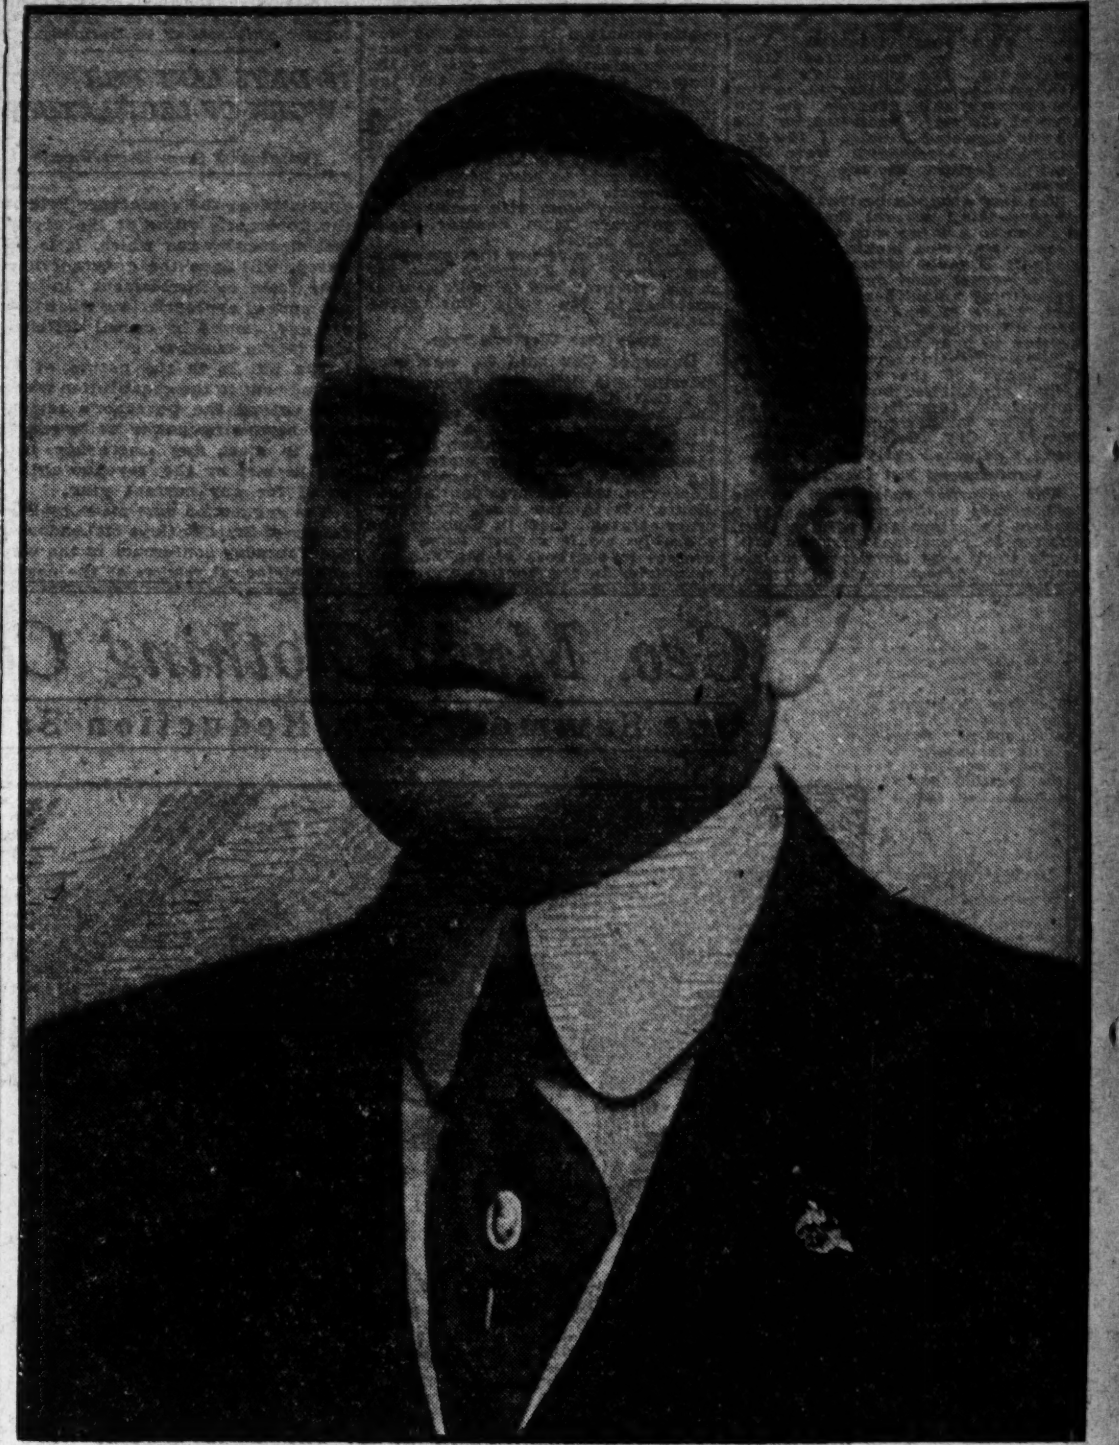

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver-Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver-Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver-Tone acts better than calomel your money is waiting for you. Even children like its pleasant taste

A few cents buys Danderine. After an application of "Danderine" you can get rid of fallen hair, any dandruff, no matter how severe, and give your hair a new life, vigor, brightness, more color and thickness.—(adv.)

Who Harry Goodhart Is, and Why He Is Running for Mayor

HARRY GOODHART, CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

WHO HE IS

Harry Goodhart is a successful business man and one of Atlanta's foremost civic workers.

He is 41 years old and has been engaged in business in Atlanta for 22 years.

He has taken an active interest in every campaign or movement for the good of Atlanta.

He was a vigorous worker in every one of the Liberty Loan Bond campaigns, and was in charge of the Liberty Loan train which covered Georgia and Florida during the Fifth Liberty Loan drive.

He was chairman of one of the committees in the Red Cross campaign.

He was chairman of the Boy Scout campaign in 1919, which went over with a whoop.

He was one of the foremost workers of the War Camp Community Service.

He is a past president of the Atlanta Ad Men's Club.

He is a past president of the Photographic Dealers' Association of America.

He is a member of many other civic organizations and is prominent in the affairs of the Masons and Elks.

He is a member of Yaarab Temple of the Shrine.

He now represents the Eighth ward on the Board of Aldermen. He was elected to this office without opposition.

HIS RECORD IS ABSOLUTELY CLEAN.

Why He Is Running for Mayor

The business men of Atlanta, feeling that the condition of the city's affairs was far from what it should be, and believing that a remedy should be provided, decided to put out a candidate for Mayor.

They saw that Atlanta's streets were in a deplorable condition.

They saw the public school system neglected and in a woeful plight.

They saw the sanitary facilities of the city in bad repair, and allowed to stand without improvement or adequate extension.

They saw the machinery of the municipality failing to function, because selfish political interests, rather than public-spirited endeavor, had been permitted to control the city's affairs.

They met and decided that there MUST be a change.

The only way to bring it about was to put out a strong Business Candidate for Mayor.

They selected Harry Goodhart as the man to give Atlanta a clean and efficient BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

They have faith in him because of his record as a business man and as an upright, public-spirited citizen.

The business men of Atlanta ask your support of Harry Goodhart at the polls on Wednesday, July 28th.

Gets Pleasant Surprise

"About 6 months ago my father was very sick with his stomach, which had been troubling him for several years. Three doctors said he had cancer and one said it was gall stones—all agreed an operation necessary, but on account of his age I was afraid to risk it. I told a friend about it who said his wife had been through the same trouble and had been cured by taking Marr's Wonderful Remedy. At once bought a bottle for father and he is now as strong as a bear and can eat more ham and cabbage than any 3 men." It removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. REFUSING SMITH, WATSON ENTERS RACE endeavored, with the frantic desperation of drowning men, to have a life line from McDuffie thrown to the Smith candidacy; but to no effect.

Senator Hoke Smith, when he entered into a combination with Thomas E. Watson to overthrow the rules under which the democratic primary was held and to humiliate the national democratic administration and Woodrow Wilson, believed that as a reward Mr. Watson would throw the force of his following behind him for the senate. But he reckoned without his hosts!

"Song of Brotherly Love."

The latter fact has been accentuated by recent references to the senator in Mr. Watson's publication, the force of his satire being directed a number of times to Senator Smith's well-known habit of claiming credit for anything accomplished that might serve him well; and concluding, prior to his announcement for the senate to oppose him, with the following from last week's issue of The Sentinel:

"Senator Smith was governor, and the legislature elected him to the 3-year unexpired term of Senator Steve Clay, who died in office; the governor refused to let the people vote on him. Governor Smith continued to preside as governor for several months, until he had distributed nearly all the pie that legitimately fell to his successor."

Then he appointed himself senator; his title was recognized."

"The holding of the governorship and the senatorship-elect at the same time was unconstitutional; but the constitution was not written by the senator, and therefore he considers it gravely defective."

"For instance, he swore to protect, defend and preserve this constitution, but is willing to put England, Spain and Japan on top of it. If Senator Lodge's reservations are tagged on to it, as you might tag a tin can to the tail of an enormous dog."

Thus it is seen that Thomas E. Watson not only possesses no sympathy for the senator's straddle on the league of nations, but holds in contempt his official life before and since he entered the United States senate, and seems to regard with doubt the very integrity of his original commission.

But that is not all.

Urged Watson's Leadership.

Perhaps no man in Georgia can control a personal following as a unit, so completely as Mr. Watson. It is a following bound by the cohesiveness of a clan, and he could have thrown a forceful balance to Senator Smith had he so desired, and that is the very suggestion of such an eventuality has been warmly protested by many of Mr. Watson's closest personal friends.

They have urged that he is deserving of the undivided leadership of his own following, to any reward that his ambition might lead, and that it should be vested upon a man who has not only led, but has been followed.

With this condition facing him, and with the desertion of Watson upon whom he centered his last hope, and upon whose wheel of fortune he placed his last political trump, it is not probable that Senator Hoke Smith will become a formidable candidate to succeed himself. Indeed, it is more probable that he will retire from the race, and from politics.

Can't Support Watson.

This leads to the speculation as to whether Senator Hoke Smith's following in Georgia will support Mr. Watson in the senatorial race, in the event the senator does not run.

Such a course would be politically unnatural. Therefore it is assumed it will not.

In the first place, the majority of Senator Smith's political supporters are good, Simon-pure, uncompromising democrats, who have even differed with the senator in many of his official acts. An investigation has proven that fact beyond doubt.

It is not natural, therefore, that they shall subscribe to a policy of out-and-out antagonism to the league of nations in any form, or to the administration of Mr. Wilson.

In the second place, Senator Smith's friends will too bitterly resent the action of Mr. Watson in deserting the senator, after the combination of May 18, to support Mr. Watson now, even should Senator Smith himself so advise, which is not probable.

In the third place, despite the action of May 18 in which Senator Smith's delegates united with Mr. Watson's delegates to overthrow the rules of party organization in Georgia, an ill-advised step that has acted against Smith, not only among Mr. Watson's followers, but among his own and among the people of Georgia generally, there is nothing in common politically between the Watson men and the Smith men in Georgia. That fact needs no argument.

Will Dorsey Run?

Assuming therefore that Senator Smith will not stand for re-election, having been deserted by his part-and particularly in Senator Smith. For that reason, among others, Mr. Watson has been urged to postpone to personally lead his own campaign, and his formal announcement for the senate illustrates that he has yielded to the wishes of those who are closest to him in personal and political life.

Will Smith Run?

The question naturally arises, will Senator Hoke Smith, with Mr. Watson in the race, stand for re-election?

Some of his political friends say he will not.

For several weeks Senator Smith has been sending out from both Washington and Atlanta volumes of literature, including a booklet, "Senator Smith's Official Record," and he has also been mixing generously each day, when not speaking at some point in the state, with legislators and visitors in the Kimball lobby.

He has told inquirers on numerous occasions that he is already in the running, and has been noticed able that no official announcement to that effect has been made by him. There has been no vitality in his campaign, and the very suggestion of his again seeking, after the crushing repudiation of him on April 20, another term in the senate has been regarded as a humiliating general apathy all over Georgia that its influence has been depressing to the senator's friends, and humiliating to him.

This fact has been demonstrated most potently by the small and listless audiences that have greeted him, so much unlike the large and enthusiastic audiences of the old days, that even some of his warmest supporters now say that the senator's attitude in attempting to hamstring a democratic administration and to embarrass a democratic president, during and since the war, as well as his coquettish flirtation with the "senate poison squad" and with party insincerity, has on the whole destroyed his usefulness to Georgia, and that his reelection under any condition is now an impossibility.

With this condition facing him, and with the desertion of Watson upon whom he centered his last hope, and upon whose wheel of fortune he placed his last political trump, it is not probable that Senator Hoke Smith will become a formidable candidate to succeed himself. Indeed, it is more probable that he will retire from the race, and from politics.

Can't Support Watson.

This leads to the speculation as to whether Senator Hoke Smith's following in Georgia will support Mr. Watson in the senatorial race, in the event the senator does not run.

Such a course would be politically unnatural. Therefore it is assumed it will not.

In the first place, the majority of Senator Smith's political supporters are good, Simon-pure, uncompromising democrats, who have even differed with the senator in many of his official acts. An investigation has proven that fact beyond doubt.

It is not natural, therefore, that they shall subscribe to a policy of out-and-out antagonism to the league of nations in any form, or to the administration of Mr. Wilson.

In the second place, Senator Smith's friends will too bitterly resent the action of Mr. Watson in deserting the senator, after the combination of May 18, to support Mr. Watson now, even should Senator Smith himself so advise, which is not probable.

That fact needs no argument.

Will Dorsey Run?

Assuming therefore that Senator Smith will not stand for re-election, having been deserted by his partner of May 18, who will make the race?

That question is one of moment, and there is little doubt that a firm announcement along that line will be made this week.

By common consent, Governor Hiram Dorsey, who stands fourth square behind the 1926 platform of the national party, is considered the logical candidate. Governor Dorsey does not want to make the race. He has said so repeatedly. He says so now. He has urged that some other good, unsullied, Simon-pure democrat make the race, and there are many acceptable men available.

However, the fact remains that Governor Dorsey's mail is besieged with appeals, many of them signed by large numbers of voters, and all over the state general voluntary movements have been begun to make Governor Dorsey the next United States senator.

Thus from an impartial observation of the situation, it is clearly evident that Governor Dorsey is going to be drafted by the democracy of the national party, to carry the standard of his party, as enunciated at San Francisco, into the campaign against Thomas E. Watson.

No Hint Is Given

By Smith at Forsyth About Entering Race

Forsyth, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) Senator Hoke Smith spoke to a fair-sized crowd here this afternoon. His speech, of two hours, was devoted mainly to setting forth his activities in securing the passage of certain bills. He also touched considerably on his opposition to several administration measures. He gave his audience no hint as to whether he would be a candidate to succeed himself. While his speech was well received, the applause was not as spontaneous, as it was thought it would be.

FLETCHER ARRESTED; HELD IN $5,000 BOND

W. T. Fletcher, alias J. W. Cline, alias F. S. Bond, indicted on December 17, 1919, by the federal grand jury for the northern district of Georgia, charged with using the United States mails to defraud, was again imprisoned in the Fulton County Jail Saturday. He was arrested shortly after being indicted, but was released after furnishing bond for $5,000, which he afterwards forfeited. His present bond is $5,000. He was brought to Atlanta Saturday by United States Deputy Marshal William J. Hayes, following his arrest in the state of Connecticut.

The indictment returned last December against Fletcher alleged that he used the mails in promoting a fraudulent scheme whereby he sold a fake partnership in a restaurant at 89 South Pryor street to J. G. Gore. Fletcher told Deputy Clerk Edward that he considered his present bond excessive, and that upon arrival of his attorney from Birmingham he would petition Judge Samuel H. Sibley to have it reduced.

BENSON NAMES SHIP FOR BIBB COUNTY

Macon, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—Admiral William S. Benson, a native of Macon, has paid tribute to his native county of Bibb by having one of the big steel cargo ships launched during the present week at the Hog Island yards named Bibb county. The launching of the craft, along with five other ships, was witnessed by 35,000 people. Mrs. H. P. Kraft, of Annapolis, a daughter of Admiral Benson, acted as sponsor for the Bibb. The name was suggested to Admiral Benson by W. W. Hardwick, a former Macon man.

Physician Explains Why He Prescribes Nuxated Iron for Run-Down, Anaemic People

Says It Quickly Increases the Strength and Energy of Men and Brings Roses to the Cheeks of Nervous, Run-down Women

Ask the first hundred strong, healthy-looking people you meet to what they owe their strength and energy and see how many reply "Nuxated Iron."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Out-door Dept.), of New York and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of nervous, run-down, anaemic people suffer from iron deficiency but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to quickly enrich the blood, and thereby put roses in the cheeks of women and give men increased strength and energy."

Unlike the older forms of iron, Nuxated Iron does not injure the teeth nor upset the stomach, but is readily assimilated and you can quickly recognize its action by a renewed feeling of buoyant health.

No matter what other iron remedies you have used without success if you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; then take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. To be absolutely sure of getting real organic iron and not some of the metallic variety always ask for

PITTSBURG KEEPS CONTROL OF STEEL

Washington, July 24.—Application of 700 steel fabricators for abrogation of the so-called Pittsburgh basing point for steel prices was dismissed today by the federal trade commission.

The vote of the commission was 3 to 2. Commissioners Murdock, Colver and Gaskill voting for dismissal, and Commissioners Thompson and Pollard voting in the negative.

The proceedings were instituted about eight months ago and extensive public hearings were held by the commission. The applicants argued that the practice, particularly of the United States Steel corporation, in fixing the price of steel as in Pittsburgh, operated to discriminate in favor of plants located in the Pittsburgh district and against fabricators and consumers in such centers as Chicago, Duluth and Birmingham. They also argued that the Pittsburgh basing point was in violation of the Clayton anti-trust act and also constituted an unfair method of competition.

GOOD MARKS MADE IN RIFLE SHOOTING BY ATLANTA BOYS

High marks in rifle firing on the military range at Camp Jackson have been made by Atlanta boys, members of the R. O. T. C. units at the Tech High, Boys' High and Commercial High schools. Attendance at the course of practice with the rifle was voluntary, but only those students who had attained certain marks in their classes were eligible.

Leutenant Colonel James M. Little, commandant of the R. O. T. C. in the Atlanta schools, is in charge of the cadets.

In the rifle firing the Atlanta boys qualified as follows: As Sharpshooters: Marlon K. Hinde, William Mc Hollingsworth, John P. Kennedy, Jr., Merrill M. Miller, John S. McDonald, Tech High school.

As Marksmen—Daniel W. Boone, Edgar E. Broughton, Tech High school; Robert T. Catren, Boys' High school; Elmer C. Conover, John H. Conway, Thomas C. Gilbert, Tech High school; Elmer W. Gray, Commercial High school; William L. Harwell, Wendell J. Holton, Emmett B. Hewton, William Hunter, Dwight P. Merrill, Tech High school; James S. McDonald, Daniel D. McIver, Boys' High school; Ben R. Padgett, Henry C. Roberts, Jr., Leonard N. Roberts, Tech High school; Thatcher M. Stinson, Boys' High school.

Marlon K. Hinde, John P. Kennedy, Jr., and Merrill M. Miller have been selected as members of the team to represent the "affiliated schools of the state of Georgia" in the national matches to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio. The team will leave Camp Jackson on July 27 or 28.

Merger of Kirkwood And Atlanta Will Be Discussed Thursday

At a meeting of council in Kirkwood Tuesday night the question of merging Kirkwood with Atlanta was brought up and a motion by Councilman Buchanan, of the first ward, that a mass meeting of Kirkwood citizens be called Thursday night at the school house auditorium for open discussion of the question was adopted. If the sentiment at the mass meeting appears to be in favor of the move, the mayor will call a special election to vote upon the matter.

The enjoyment of beautiful flowers is common to all the inhabitants of Japan.

THE TRUTH

To the People of Atlanta:

In my race for Mayor I have told Atlantans the truth. To do this I had to expose present political conditions. The political ring fights me because I did this. I welcome their fight. Either they will control or Atlanta's men and women will control.

This issue is clear. For sinister purposes and to deceive the workers, two issues have been thrown into the campaign by the political ring. These issues relate to the New Charter for Atlanta and the supposed influence of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

I want to clear these issues. The question of a New Charter can, in no way, be determined in this contest. A New Charter is not being voted upon. The political ring denied the people the right to vote upon the charter. They are not voting on it in this election.

A Charter can only be granted by the State Legislature. The present Legislature will not consider the question. The next Legislature meets in June, 1921. A Charter Bill cannot be considered or voted upon before June, 1921.

This statement is made that the people may understand that all the denunciation of the Charter is solely for present political purposes, and only to deceive the voters and to distract attention from the issues in the mayor's race.

I am in favor of a new Charter. Mr. Key says he is in favor of charter reform. I favor letting the people be fully heard as to the kind of government they want, and then let them vote upon it. When elected Mayor, I shall follow these convictions. In the meantime, this question cannot be determined before the Legislature of 1921 meets.

I have tried to clear up the political dust that the ring has purposely raised around this question and to make clear to those favoring and those opposing a new charter, that this issue cannot be determined in the race for Mayor.

The other issue made by the political ring is the charge that I am running for Mayor in the interest of the Georgia Railway and Power Company. This is absolutely untrue, is known to be untrue by the ring, and is made wholly in a vicious attempt to further its own political control, through appeals to prejudice. The identical charge has been made against every man who opposed the ring.

The same charge would have been made by Mr. Key against any Atlantan who dared to oppose him.

The charge that I am running as the candidate of any industry or any class is false. I never owned a dollar's stock in this company or had a business transaction with it.

Mr. Key well knows that the Mayor of Atlanta has no jurisdiction over rates on street cars, for gas or electricity; and that the full power of determining fair rates for PUBLIC utility service is vested solely in the State Railroad Commission. This has been determined by the courts.

As Mayor of Atlanta I will always see that at the hearings before the State Railroad Commission, in the matter of rates for service or anything else of public interest and welfare, the citizens of Atlanta are fully and properly represented, and that their side of any issue is forcefully presented for the railroad commission's fair determination.

When elected Mayor I shall treat this company exactly as every other industry in Atlanta is treated—no better and no worse; and from every industry I shall exact that class of service and that proportion of taxes to which Atlanta is justified.

I wanted to clear up this issue. The people are entitled when they vote to know the truth. I HAVE TOLD IT.

Learning a Useful Profession

THE YOUNG WOMAN who learns telephone operating is trained in a profession that not only gives her a sufficient income to make her self-supporting, but also is of a high degree of usefulness to the public she serves.

UNLIKE MANY OTHER PROFESSIONS open to the young business woman, the student telephone operator IS NOT CALLED UPON TO PAY FOR HER INSTRUCTION.

ON THE CONTRARY, if she has the necessary qualifications, instruction is given to her free of charge, and in addition, she is paid a good salary during the entire training period.

AFTER SHE COMPLETES HER TRAINING, she is assigned to a light, clean central office, where she works under the best of conditions. Her pay is good, her advancement is rapid, and she is protected by a liberal Benefit Plan.

If you are between the ages of 16 and 35 and would like to know more about telephone operating, call at our Employment Bureau, 78 South Pryor (first floor), any time between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m. We shall be glad to furnish additional information or talk it over with you.

HUFF IS CONFIDENT HE WILL BE WINNER

Says Key and Goodhart Will Get Shock When Votes Are Counted.

In a statement issued Saturday, Dr. L. N. Huff, candidate for mayor, declares that when the votes are counted next Wednesday two candidates in the race are going to be surprised at the results. "Mayor Key and Mr. Goodhart are breaking down and tramping on a great deal of corn, while I am taking the rows as they come and trying to hoe them clean," says Dr. Huff, "and believe I am succeeding."

His statement follows: "It occurs to me that Mayor Key and Mr. Goodhart ought to come together in the Auditorium one evening this week and complete in short order their devouring process. Two candidates, having such implacable and bloodthirsty hatred of each other ought not to stay apart. Night after night we hear them roaring like the lions of the jungle. I have not delivered any thundering orations on people's front porches to audiences which found a plenty of seats. I am not going to. It is quite doubtful if I could make a speech if I were to try, not being so gifted in the vocal organs as Mayor Key, and having no 'Goodhart campaign committee' to grind them out for me in the papers whether I succeeded in reciting them or not.

"Abundant Promises." "But I am going out among the people and seeing, I believe, a greater number than either of the gentlemen mentioned above, presenting my candidacy face to face, singing no hymns of hate, threatening no violence, and making no promises so absurd as the ones being promulgated by my opponents. The cordial reception which I am receiving everywhere I go; the sincere encouragement which I am receiving from the people in the stores, the offices, the factories, and the absolutely that at least two candidates in the race for mayor are going to be surprised when the votes are counted and it won't be myself. The mayor and Mr. Goodhart are breaking down and tramping on a great deal of corn, while I am taking the rows as they come and trying to hoe them clean, and I believe I am succeeding."

"My platform differs from that of Mayor Key in this particular: That I am not running to perpetuate a personal grudge against the Power company or any other interest, and do not ask to be placed at the head of the city government for the purpose of using it as an instrument of vengeance. My platform differs from that of Mr. Goodhart in this particular: That I shall concentrate my attention upon three big things—streets, schools, parks—and I do not insult the intelligence of the people by telling them these departments can be improved without any money."

Stands for Unity. "I stand for unity in place of strife. I stand for peace in place of war. We have had a constant feud fomented by the mayor for the past two years, and it has got us nothing. We will never get forward until we get together. The Power company is not going to loot the city treasury or the people's pocket books while I am mayor, but neither am I going to devote myself to the exclusive occupation of clubbing the company."

"Once we get peace, progress will be easy. My platform of progress consists of better streets, better schools and better parks. These first of all they are worth our while to concentrate on. I am advocating them, but he promises to get them at a reduced expense."

"I am not running for publicity purposes. This seems to be a sort of stock-in-trade answer which the other candidates are making to my arguments. It is no doubt true that I have advertised some very good reasons why neither of them should be elected. My desire is to render a service to the city, and independent service, beholden to nobody, clean-cut and progressive, giving the people an administration which has a higher object than personal vengeance, and treating the city with a higher degree of fair dealing than the foolish Goodhart guff about great improvements at reduced expense."

"All that I ask is an opportunity to make good. No man or woman who casts a ballot for me will ever have cause to regret my election."

SULUNIAS TO SPEND MONTHS IN EUROPE

Mr. Sulunias, who sails from New York on the President Wilson, July 27, for Greece, will spend several months with relatives before returning to Atlanta.

Mr. Sulunias stated before he left Atlanta that a statement published in local papers Friday to the effect that Aleck Brown was his partner in the business, was an error as Mr. Brown is simply looking after the interests of the business during Mr. Sulunias' absence.

A hotel for dogs and cats was opened a short time ago in London to care for the pets of persons leaving the city temporarily.

There are three big things as I look at them—our streets, our schools, our parks, our playgrounds. We need more of contact where the personal equation counts for so much.

But first of all, peace; first of all, an end to the bitter struggle between the two great ed our people against one another.

I am not a candidate for mayor of Atlanta to conduct war upon the utilities, or to attack the city government, or to along a theory of public ownership, which the public evidently is not interested in.

Neither am I a candidate to take over the city's water power company directors and their business associates as a party to the city government.

Our city government ought to be going forward by leaps and bounds, and not standing in the class where she belongs, and the maintenance of the city government as a company is neither part nor parcel of such a program.

It is the duty of the people to get out of city politics and

HAIR GROWN ON BALD HEAD
After being almost totally bald, a New York man happily found something which brought out a new, luxuriant growth of hair of which he is so proud that he will send the information free to anyone who asks for it. Write: John H. Britt, Station F, New York, N. Y. Many women and men have grown hair after all else failed. Cut this out—show others; this is genuine.

CHALMERS

With HOT SPOT & RAM'S HORN accomplishes more with the low grade "gas" today than many cars did with a high test "gas" years ago

THE resourceful minds in the Chalmers engineering corps have wrestled with the gasoline problem, solved it; and now a Chalmers does undreamed of things with low grade gasoline.

Hot Spot and Ram's horn, accepted by the public and the automobile trade alike, as the means of getting out the power that nature stored in gasoline, perform engineering miracles.

That they get the power out is well known.

That they increase mileage from "gas" is well known.

That they reduce vibration is well known.

That they save in up-keep and repairs a large sum each year is well known.

But how well known are these facts:

1. A Chalmers engine is practically carbon exempt.
2. A fouled spark plug is seldom found in a Chalmers.
3. An improperly adjusted carburetor is seldom experienced in a Chalmers.

Only those who drive a Chalmers know, and they will tell you that these are but a few of the reasons why a Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

Keely's July Month-End Clean-Up Sale Now On

Seasonable goods in broken lines grouped and re-grouped for quick clean-up in the next three days. Also many late deliveries of fresh, new summer goods that haven't been in the house long enough to lose any of their pristine newness. All must go, no matter how great the sacrifice. FINAL reductions have been made; so that savings are really extraordinary.

Great Clean-Up Sale Dresses of Beautiful Silks and Voiles

"Don't let one of these dresses be here when we get back"—

These were the positive instructions of our buyer, who, with his assistants, left Friday for the east to stock up on fall lines.

So, now comes the rival of all previous sales of dresses. We must close out every one, even if we have to give them away. We must get ready for fall lines which will be descending upon us within the next few days.

Therefore, to make sure these garments go quickly, they've been marked so low that no woman can resist the extraordinary savings.

Cool, Pretty Voiles

Just the type of frock for mid-summer or early fall. Dark and light prints in all the most desirable patterns. Tiered, flounced, ruffled, tucked, pleated—every style one could fancy. There's only one drawback—sizes range from 36 to 40 only.

The All-Conquering Voiles

A vast array of the most elegant kinds goes on sale tomorrow at a price that is remarkably low. Voiles that are exquisite in color combination, charming in their novelty of texture and endless in their variety of styles.

No fabric is more practical for mid-summer wear. These are the kinds that Fashion has chosen for her prettiest frocks, such as prim little polka dots, superlative Georgette designs, quilts, scrolls, flying petals, vines and the more conventional effects. The greatest assortment you'll find anywhere, and unexcelled at this price:

25 pieces $1.50	Butterfield Applique Voile

The Undeniable Chic of Navy Blue Serge

Even the warmest days can't dispel the smart style of the serge frock, especially when it wants to go a-traveling. The school girl dotes on it, and, of course, she must have at least one serge to start the season.

44-Inch French Serge—$2.50

"A pippin," the manager called it, when he gave the ad, and we thoroughly agree with him. Beautiful quality in a soft, chiffon finish, and strictly all wool. All colors, including black and navy.

46-Inch English Twill Serge $2.50

This with its wiry, dust-shedding propensity is ideal for middie suits and skirts. Strictly all wool, sponged and shrunk. Comes in cream as well as all the other good shades.

A Great Three-Price Sale of Fine Low SHOES

Beginning tomorrow, for one week, we offer our entire line of women's fine low shoes at prices that are only a fraction of their regular value.

These shoes are our own good lines, bought regularly, and some have not been in the house a week.

And sizes, too, are complete. Not odds and ends you usually find in a sale, but complete runs of sizes in the smartest, newest styles shown this season.

Pumps, Oxfords, Ties, Colonials and Strap Slippers, in brown and black leathers, patent, satin and suede. Cuban, military, French and Baby Louis heels. Shoes for dress and shoes for walking.

HARDING IS SILENT ABOUT CASE OF DEBS

Marion, Ohio, July 22.—Although declaring for "generous amnesty for political prisoners," Senator Harding declined today to express an opinion regarding the case of Eugene V. Debs, the socialist nominee for president, who is serving in the Atlanta penitentiary on conviction of attempting to obstruct the draft.

The republican nominee outlined his position in the reply to P. P. Christensen, presidential candidate of the farmer-labor party, who recently telegraphed both Senator Harding and Governor Cox, asking that they use their influence to secure executive clemency for Debs.

"I have your telegram relating to the release from prison of Eugene V. Debs," Senator Harding wired. "I believe as heartily as you do in freedom of thought and speech and guarantee our liberties, and I can well believe we differ little about the abuses of that freedom when the public is in peril.

"I believe in generous amnesty for political prisoners, but this broad policy does not justify a hasty disposition of any case before it is considered on its merits. It is not for me now to review a particular case, and it is impossible to utter an opinion without such review."

The reply to Mr. Christensen was made in a general clean-up of accumulated correspondence which occupied Senator Harding's attention virtually all day. A large part of his task was acknowledgment of the many messages he has received congratulating him on his acceptance speech. He declared himself well pleased by the response given to his speech throughout the country.

Among the few callers during the day was former Senator La Fayette Young, publisher of The Des Moines Capital, who issued a statement afterward declaring that if the republican party could not elect Harding, "it could not elect any one."

"I am greatly pleased with Senator Harding's speech of acceptance," said the statement, "being a newspaper man, he had the intuition as regards what the public had in mind. Nobody but a newspaper man could have thought of making that summary of his creed. This was bold and manly. He met every issue face to face."

Late in the afternoon the senator went with Mrs. Harding and some friends for a long automobile ride.

GORDON SOLDIERS DISCUSS PROPOSED CLUBHOUSE IN CITY

At a meeting of all the field and staff officers, by the camp commander, Major General David C. Shanks, held in the Library theater yesterday morning, definite plans were made for the proposed soldiers' club to be established in Atlanta. It is probable that the offer of the Atlanta Auditorium-Armory will be accepted and this will be equipped with arrangements for a better and more permanent club room.

Colonel Charles R. Noyes, Major W. D. A. Anderson and Lieutenant Colonel G. L. Townsend were appointed to act in conjunction with a committee to be appointed from Camp Jessup and Fort McPherson. In addition to this committee, one non-commissioned officer from each regiment and like unit will also make recommendations when they have inspected the proposed club room; when these committees have made their report the work of furnishing the place of recreation will begin.

It was pointed out at the meeting held this morning that the Auditorium-Armory is not centrally located, and cannot be reached with sufficient ease to make it the desirable place for the proposed recreation room. It was the consensus of opinion that the club room should be located, if possible, on the Camp Gordon car line. A cafeteria is needed, and it is the desire of the officers behind the movement that small comfortable rooms with cots be provided, and soldiers who desire to spend the night in town may do so at the minimum cost.

Gordon Will Prepare Young Men for Course At Military Academy

The war department will establish a West Point preparatory course at Camp Gordon to receive the candidates for the southeastern department and to add them in preparing for the entrance examinations to the United States Military academy, which will be held between December 1 and 15 of this year.

The war department has recently issued instructions that enlist-men of the army are eligible to enter West Point between the ages of 19 and 22 years. The soldier must have been for at least one year in the army as an enlisted man. During the year 1921, however, any applicant who has served honorably and faithfully not less than one year in the armed forces of the United States, and who possesses the other qualifications required by law, may be admitted, provided he is between the age of 18 and 34 years. Prior service in the army, either by draft or by voluntary enlistment, or in the national guard, while in the federal service, may be considered in determining the applicant's eligibility.

FINE PROGRAM READY FOR FERTILIZER MEN

Local fertilizer men are preparing for the reception of delegates from all sections of the state to the fourteenth annual meeting of the Fertilizer Mixers' Association of Georgia, to be held in Atlanta next Wednesday when matters of wide agricultural interest will be discussed. The meeting will be given over to a business session for the discussion by prominent speakers of the raw materials situation, and the general trade outlook. New officers will be elected at luncheon at the Ansley at 1 o'clock.

Among the speakers on the program are Lee Ascraft, of the Ashcraft-Wilkinson Co., and A. A. Smith, of Atlanta; G. S. Alexander, of G. S. Alexander & Sons, Savannah; S. H. Wilcox, of Augusta; Isidore Eashinski, of Dublin, and C. L. G. Thomas and H. C. Fisher, of Atlanta.

REORGANIZATION SALE

Howdy, Folks!
We're Glad to Be Here

Yes, indeed, we're glad to get to Atlanta and hope you will like us as much as we like you. We have been wanting to come here for a long time but your town (now OUR town, if you will allow us to call it that), was so busy we could not find a suitable location—even now we did not find the location we wanted, but as we just couldn't keep away any longer, we bought the first store that would sell out so as to get their lease, for that's the only thing about Zaban's we want to keep, and as soon as we can get rid of their stock we will give Atlanta the same sort of furniture stores that we now have in Memphis and in Birmingham.

Ask any one from Memphis the name of the leading furniture store there and you'll hear them say "The Rhodes Furniture Company." Ask any one from Birmingham the name of the most progressive furniture store there, and you'll hear them say "The Rhodes-Carroll Furniture Company" (despite the fact that our big store was recently destroyed by fire and we are now in cramped quarters.)

It's our ambition to make the Carroll Furniture Company mean the same thing in Atlanta and we sincerely hope you will learn to like us—to trust us—to depend upon us just as the citizens of Memphis and Birmingham have learned to depend upon us there.

Ask your banker about us—consult Dun's or Bradstreet's about our Memphis and Birmingham stores so you may learn first-hand that you can put your full confidence in us—in our stocks, our methods and our promises.

Our Atlanta store will be in charge of D. J. Ansboro, an Atlantan, a man who has been long and favorably known in the Atlanta furniture business—a man who knows what Atlanta likes and who will try to give it to you. He will be surrounded by well-known Atlanta men and women whose chief duty will be to serve you—to please you.

We will do a little more than our share to become good friends and neighbors, and sincerely hope you will give us a helping hand.

Our first thought is to dispose of the Zaban stock as quickly as possible (and we are offering it at prices that will make you help us do so), in order that we can remodel the building and give you the kind of store we know you will be proud of.

Carroll Furniture Co. Buys Stock and Leases of Zaban Company

A business deal, involving approximately $150,000, was consummated the past week, when John Carroll, of Birmingham, Ala., purchased outright the stock and leases of the Zaban Furniture company, on Whitehall street, a few doors south of Mitchell street.

In the purchase of this big stock of furniture, the new company, to be known as the Carroll Furniture company, becomes a link in the chain of furniture stores that are being operated throughout the south by Herman Rhodes, of Memphis, and Mr. Carroll.

The new company not only secured the Zaban stock, which will be closed out as early and as advantageously as possible, but it has secured the adjoining store, now occupied by a grocery house, and as soon as possession can be secured, the buildings will be remodeled and made into one of the largest and most attractive of all the big stores in the Rhodes-Carroll chain.

Herman Rhodes, who is president of the new Atlanta company, operates two of the largest stores in Memphis, and conducts one of the largest furniture businesses of the south.

Mr. Carroll, vice president and treasurer, is the head of the Rhodes-Carroll Furniture company, one of the big furniture houses of Birmingham.

In speaking of their new Atlanta store, Mr. Carroll said: "Both Mr. Rhodes and I have had our eyes on Atlanta for a long time, realizing it is one of the fastest growing cities in the United States, and we determined on having a store here as soon as possible."

"Mr. Rhodes and I have made several trips here without being successful in securing a desirable location, and when we heard that the Zaban Furniture company was going out of business, we decided to wait no longer, and bought out their entire stock in order to secure their lease, which we consider extremely desirable."

"In addition to securing the building now occupied by the Zaban Furniture company, we have secured the store adjoining it on the north, and as soon as the grocery company occupying it can move, probably the middle of the fall, we will remodel the entire building and give Atlanta one of the largest and most attractive stores in our chain."

"It is our intention to dispose of the present Zaban stock as quickly as possible so we can reopen our new and greater store with the same high class of merchandise we sell in our stores in other southern cities."

"We have also secured an able Atlanta furniture man for manager of our local store, D. J. Ansboro, who is favorably known to the trade."

"It is my intention to devote a considerable part of my own time to the Atlanta store, as on my numerous visits here to secure a location, I have fallen in love with the city."

"Just as soon as we can dispose of the Zaban stock, we will start remodeling the building, and we expect to spend many thousands of dollars in putting in a handsome front and attractive sales and display rooms. The entire building will be used for sales rooms, and we are looking at locations for a large warehouse for our surplus stocks. It is likely we will keep a large reserve stock here at all times for shipment to our other stores."

GIRLS IN REFORMATORY ENGAGE IN RACE RIOT

Bedford, N. Y., July 24.—Inmates of the State Reformatory for Women engaged in a serious race riot today, which started in the laundry, and quickly spread to all cottages in the institution.

When scores of white inmates joined the fray, the laundry was wrecked. About 150 girls took part in the riot. The negroes were outnumbered five to one, but they held off their opponents with knives and distasteful. The disturbance was quelled by state troopers and the Bedford police.

Gillette

Buy one Gillette Tire—two—three or a set.

You will get maximum mileage at minimum cost from every one of them.

—buy a thousand Gillette Tires—or a thousand sets. You will get the same thing. Most in mileage for your money.

You don't have to trust to luck. It's never a case of a good tire or two—then a bad one. Every Gillette is the best a tire can be made. There is but one standard of quality—the finest. There is but one length of service—the longest.

That's what brought world fame to Gillette Tires before they had been on the market twelve months.

Customers were soon numbered by hundreds of thousands. They obtained better service and more of it than ever before. They come back. Rebought. Obtained the same kind of service. The result was—the second year sale of Gillette Tires was greater than the second year sale of any other tire ever produced.

The most phenomenal sales record ever made—due absolutely to the greatest mileage for the greatest number of users.

That is the strongest guarantee ever "written" for tire quality. It assures as nothing else can—that in every Gillette Tire you ever buy you will secure satisfactory mileage. There's "even" excellence—uniformity of quality—and mileage that can be had only through the exclusive Gillette Chilled Rubber Process—an advanced method of manufacture that toughens rubber as iron is toughened when changed to steel. There's unparalleled road resistance—absolute dependability—little or no tread or fabric separation. No deterioration due to weather conditions—nothing but wear quality. Always your money's worth in mileage. Try them out. Put a couple on your car now. See how much longer they wear—better they serve. And how much you save in cost per mile. All sizes. Cord—fabric and non-skid. Gillette Rubber Co., Eau Claire, Wis.

ANNUAL BARBECUE HELD BY THE K. C. AT BURNS COTTAGE

More than 500 persons attended the annual barbecue and dance of the local Knights of Columbus held Saturday afternoon at the Burns cottage, near the Soldiers' Home. The event was the most successful social affair in the history of local order. The crowd consisted of members, their relatives and guests, a number of strangers, as the general public had been invited to participate in the festivities. Twenty disabled soldiers who had seen service overseas were guests of the Knights.

Reaney would be held, police stated, pending the outcome of the boy's wounds, which hospital attendants said may prove fatal.

Clues Are Sought To Tell Identity Of Murdered Girl

Handwriting Contained in Series of Letters May Clear Up the Trunk Mystery.

New York, July 24.—Clues obtained today from handwriting contained in a series of letters which passed between Detroit and New York are expected to reveal the identity of the woman whose mutilated and unclad body was found in a trunk here yesterday, police investigating the case announced tonight.

The letters were produced by Andrew J. Branic, a local expressman. Branic also told the officials of two South Americans for whom he stored a trunk in 1918, and one of whom later ordered the trunk shipped to "E. Leroy, care of the Y. M. C. A." in Detroit. The name of Leroy is that of the person reported as having occupied an apartment at No. 105 Harper street, Detroit, the address on the trunk in which the body was found yesterday.

The most recent letter to which the police attached importance was one received by Branic June 11, from a man in Detroit. It was signed "A. A. Tatum," and ordered him to get a trunk sent from the trunk to "E. Leroy, care of the Y. M. C. A." in Detroit. He tried to locate the trunk, but was not able to find it.

It was last January, Branic told the police, that he received the letter directing the trunk to be sent to E. Leroy. That letter, he said, was in the same handwriting as the Tatum letter, but was signed O. J. Woods, the name which the expressman said was used by one of the two South Americans. These men, according to Branic, were known to him first as A. J. Fernandez and Joseph Yanez.

Fernandez later told him he was arrested under the name of O. J. Woods, in connection with an automobile accident in Brooklyn, involving the death of a man. He was released on bail and left New York. Branic received a letter from him in Detroit in December, 1919, and in July, 1919, was asked to get a trunk and hold it until Woods wanted it. This trunk was ordered sent to Leroy.

Throughout all of the correspondence with A. A. Tatum, O. J. Woods and E. Leroy, Branic declared, the handwriting was the same.

Captain Carey, of the homicide bureau, said that the trunk, which had concealed the woman's body for more than a month, together with a rope used to fasten it, and articles of clothing employed as wadding, had been sent to Detroit, from whence it had been shipped here on June 10. It should arrive there today, he said, in time for detectives of the Michigan city to begin their search for the owners.

No clue to the identity of the slain woman was discovered in the examination of the body by the coroner's office here.

slain woman was discovered in the examination of the body by the coroner's office here.

Unusual Obstacles. Detectives working on the case here said today that the mystery presented unusual obstacles in the way of early solution. Chief among these is the fact that the cause of death could not be determined because all vital organs except the brain had been removed before the body was thrust into the gruesome container in which it was discovered yesterday.

Dr. Charles Norris, city medical examiner, reported today that an examination of the dead woman's brain failed to show any trace of an anesthetic having been administered before the woman's death. This examination was made to determine if she had died as a result of a criminal operation. The brain of the woman, who was said to be between 25 and 30 years old, was the only vital organ left that could be examined, all her internal organs having been removed before the trunk was shipped to "Mr. Douglas, New York city."

If death was due to criminal operation, the analysis of the brain should reveal traces of chloroform, said Dr. Charles Norris, who added that if the victim was poisoned, the same analysis should so indicate.

EDGEWOOD PEOPLE DEMAND POSTOFFICE

Following an appeal by citizens of Edgewood for better postoffice facilities to Congressman W. D. Upshaw, Acting Postmaster George C. Rogers, Assistant Postmaster J. C. Station and Assistant Superintendent of Mails Ed Styrone accompanied Congressman Upshaw to Edgewood Saturday to investigate the situation.

R. J. Suber, an Edgewood merchant who had been postmaster for many years, resigned several weeks ago because of the small salary paid, and since his resignation the Edgewood people have been served by two carriers working out from the Atlanta postoffice. Edgewood, with a population of 4,000, has had no place to purchase stamps and mail parcel post and registered mail. Speaking of the situation Saturday night, Congressman Upshaw said: "Edgewood is a community too large and splendid to suffer such postal inconveniences as its citizens are now passing through, and I am sure that Washington can be made to see it from our viewpoint, and I am of the opinion that it will not be long until the Edgewood postoffice is re-established. Mr. Upshaw said that he found the Atlanta postal officials very anxious to serve the Edgewood people, but that they had been handicapped by a technical ruling of the department at Washington."

A WAR-TIME ILL THAT'S SPREADING. HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT! BRED in the war trenches of Europe, a wave of ordinary ITCH is spreading over the country. This skin disease, history shows, has always prevailed, following wars and the concentration of armies. It was common during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the itch after the Spanish-American War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy from the itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late war will testify to its merits.

If directions are followed, HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price (75c) to any dissatisfied user.

A Madford, Oklahoma, man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says: "Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit I had it badly. Your Hunt's Salve, however, cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice is those who have to scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases, and is sold on our guarantee locally only by Munn's, Broad Street at Walton, Atlanta. A. B. RICHARDS MEDICINE COMPANY, INC., SHERMAN, TEXAS

REFERENDUM ORDERED ON RAIL WAGE AWARD

Chicago, July 24.—The order for a nation-wide referendum by rail-way employees on the wage award of the federal labor board was completed today, with a strong plea.

ELECT HUFF MAYOR

against a strike, at a meeting of the executives of the railroad brotherhoods, before they departed.

"The labor board," the order states, "is the highest court of appeal in this controversy. No higher tribunal created by the transportation act and its decision must either be accepted or rejected without further negotiation."

Although the award was much less than the employees should have been awarded, much less than they were entitled to, and although they are, and have a right to be, disappointed with the amount of increase in wages granted, more than 84 per cent of them have agreed through their representatives to accept the award.

HE USED PISTOL IN FORCING WIFE TO QUIT HUSBAND

Framingham, Mass., July 24.—Thomas Drake, wearer of a distinguished service cross for heroism in the world war, was taken in custody today by a West Virginia officer and started back to Clarksburg in that state today charged with enticing Flora E. Gill from her home by telling her that unless she accompanied him he would kill her husband, M. P. Gill, of Clarksburg. Mrs. Gill is the daughter of H. H. Colbourne, president of a coal and gas company of Clarksburg. Drake has been employed here for some months.

According to the Framingham police, who held him pending the arrival of Mr. Gill and a West Virginia officer, Drake was a former auditor of the young woman when he returned from the war and learned she had been married, was unable to conquer his infatuation. The police say that after several unsuccessful attempts to induce her to elope with him, Drake went to her house several days ago in the absence of her husband and, displaying a revolver, compelled her to pack a grip and accompany him north. From Washington the young woman managed to send a telegram secretly to her husband and when the train reached Framingham Drake was detained by the police.

15 YEARS AT LARGE, HE FACES DEATH ON THE GALLOWS

Cleveland, Ohio, July 24.—Stoutly maintaining his innocence of the charge that he is Robert L. Dix, negro, who escaped from the Birmingham, Ala., jail in 1905, three days before he was to have been hanged, James H. George, a barber arrested here a few days ago, has asked that his photograph be sent to Birmingham for identification. When word came that the photograph had been identified by Birmingham old residents, according to the police, George asked that he be taken back to Birmingham to establish his innocence. A telegram to Cleveland police says an officer is on his way here to take George back.

George was arrested here upon information furnished by James Cooper, who says he was a deputy sheriff in the jail at the time the prisoner escaped.

Birmingham, Ala., July 24.—Having obtained extradition papers from Montgomery last night, city detectives planned to leave late today for Cleveland, Ohio, where they hope to identify a suspect said to be Robert L. Dix, negro, convicted murderer of Bert Pennell, a local street car motorman. Dix stabbed Pennell to death on his car October 16, 1905. He was convicted of first degree murder, but escaped from the county jail before sentence was pronounced.

During the fifteen years he has been at large Dix has been reported captured in various cities and detectives have been sent for him, only to find the man under arrest was not the murderer. This time, the police say, a photograph received from Cleveland has been identified by eight persons as that of Dix. With the detectives who will make the trip will be J. M. Kraus, who has known the negro all his life.

The police here say Dix has spent most of his time at sea working on boats between San Francisco and Honolulu. According to information received from Cleveland the suspect was arrested while working as a barber and gave his place of birth as Pike Road, Ala.

PREFERENCE RAIL RATES SUSPENDED ON EXPORTS

Washington, July 24.—Operation of the section of the new merchant marine act providing preferential rail rates on exports sent to sea-board for movement in American bottoms will be suspended until January 1, 1927. It was announced today at the shipping board.

Chairman Benson explained that this time would be necessary for an investigation of facts and intelligent application of the provisions of the act. This section is one of those to which foreign steamship companies have objected and ultimately it is expected to be made the basis for diplomatic conversations between the American and other foreign governments.

CITY OWNERSHIP BARRED BY COURT FROM THE VOTERS

Toledo, Ohio, July 24.—There will be no appeal from the order of Judge John M. Killits in United States district court today in which the city is enjoined from submitting a street car municipal ownership ordinance to the people August 10.

The county prosecutor representing the board of elections against which the injunction was directed, said today that the federal court of appeals is now in session and the time before the date set for the election is too short for further court procedure. It was proposed by the city to submit two ordinances providing for bond issues of four millions and three millions respectively for acquiring and operating a transportation system.

ASKS $25 A QUART FOR 357 QUARTS OF LOST LIQUOR

New York, July 24.—A value of $25 a quart is placed on 357 quarts of whiskey which form the basis of a damage suit filed here today by W. E. Stokes, against the Importers' Warehouse Company, Inc. The action is brought to recover $225 for the alleged loss of the whiskey from a warehouse in which Mr. Stokes claims he stored 600 cases in 1912. Shortly before the prohibition law went into effect in 1918, Mr. Stokes alleges, he called for the liquor and discovered the loss.

Patriotic Rally.

The annual patriotic rally at Rock Chapel tabernacle, in DeKalb county, will be held next Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock, with dinner on the grounds. Congressman W. D. Upshaw has secured a Camp Gordon band to furnish music for the occasion. Among the speakers will be Rev. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta; Rev. W. P. King, of Griffin; M. L. Brittain, state school superintendent, and Congressman Upshaw. Chaplain Stull and General Shanks, commanding general at Camp Gordon, have accepted invitations to be present.

"GERMAN" SCHULZ NAMED DIRECTOR TULANE SPORTS

New Orleans, July 24.—(Special.) Announcement of the appointment of A. G. (German) Schulz as athletic director at Tulane university was made tonight by President Westfield, of the athletic council. Schulz was one of the greatest linemen "Hurry-up" Yost ever developed at the University of Michigan and is a member of Walter Camp's all-time all-American eleven. Coach Shaugnessy will be retained to handle the football squad with "Bill" Drennan as his assistant.

Yeggmen Get $15,000.

Henderson, N. C., July 24.—Yeggmen who blew open the vaults of the Bank of Macon, 20 miles north of here, last night, escaped with Liberty bonds and war savings stamps valued at $15,000, according to J. M. Coleman, president of the bank, who discovered the robbery this morning.

ANGLO-JAPANESE PACT TO CONFORM TO LEAGUE

Tokio, July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The foreign office today issued a note containing the text of a joint communication by Japan and Great Britain to the league of nations notifying the principle of the covenant of the league in connection with the removal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, should that alliance be renewed next year.

The text of the note of the foreign office follows: "In view of the fact that the term of ten years for which the Anglo-Japanese agreement of alliance is provided to remain in force expires July 13, 1923, the governments of Japan and Great Britain, after an exchange of views, addressed the following joint communication to the league of nations July 8:

"The governments of Japan and Great Britain have come to the conclusion that the Anglo-Japanese agreement of 1911 now existing between the two countries, though in harmony with the spirit of the covenant of the league of nations, is not entirely consistent with the letter of that covenant, which both governments earnestly desire to respect. "They, accordingly, have the honor jointly to inform the league that they recognize the principle that if the said agreement be continued after July, 1921, it must be in a form not inconsistent with that covenant."

EX-ARMY FLYER INJURED IN FALL NEAR AMERICUS

Americus, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—Tom Potts, a reserve lieutenant in the air service, and former instructor at Southern field, was severely injured in an airplane accident late yesterday near Plains, 12 miles west of Americus.

Potts was flying in company with Sergeant Pat Janney, and had just started to return here from the Plains landing field, when the accident occurred. The plane had reached a height of 200 feet and was in a steep bank when the motor went dead. Janney escaped unhurt, but Potts had one of his ribs broken and a gash requiring nine stitches to close, was out in his face, besides numerous bruises.

He was brought to Americus and will recover. Since leaving the air service in January, 1919, Potts, whose home is in Richmond, Va., and whose father is connected with The Richmond News-Leader, has been working for the Southeastern Underwriters' association in the engineering department.

SAILING OF MAYFLOWER IS BEING CELEBRATED

Southampton, England, July 24.—Scenes attending the departure 200 years ago of the little band of adventurers known to history as the Pilgrim fathers were re-enacted today in a pageant inaugurating a four days' celebration of the tercentenary of the sailing of the Mayflower.

Southampton desires of reminding the world of her proud claim to fame as the original port of embarkation of the founders of the American commonwealth, is vying with Plymouth in commemorating the event.

Outstanding events of American history, including the Boston tea party, Lincoln making his address at Gettysburg and American intervention in the recent world war were depicted by the pageant, which will be repeated during Monday's Tuesday's and Wednesday's programs.

COOPER PLANNING TO RUN FOR SENATE ON WET PLATFORM

Macon, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—John R. Cooper, Macon criminal lawyer, stated today that he is seriously considering entering the race for United States senator against Hoke Smith.

Mr. Cooper proposes to make his race on a "wet" platform. If he runs he proposes to advocate the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and his platform will endorse local option. He will also come out flat-footedly against the league of nations and woman suffrage.

This will not be Attorney Cooper's first experience in politics, he having previously run for congress in the sixth district and was also a candidate for the United States senate when W. J. Harris was elected.

It Is Not Unlawful To Smell Like Liquor, According to This

Augusta, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—United States Commissioner Charles J. Skinner, Jr., yesterday held that no man can be convicted of violation of the prohibition law by evidence of smell only. He had before him the case of Charles D. Jones. The accusation rested on evidence of the smell of corn liquor in a jug. The commissioner did not regard that this evidence was sufficient "probable cause" on which to bind over the accused. The commissioner regarded that the accused was guilty, but did not believe that proof was at hand with which to convict.

The REASON for This, the greatest

Sale of Furniture

ever offered in the south

(a quarter of a million dollars' worth)

IS: an unfinished warehouse--and our three 5-story showrooms crowded to the last foot of space--- and many thousand dollars' worth of finest furniture enroute from the factories

No Storage Space

Positively there is no place within our command to place this new furniture when it arrives. Our fall contracts are just being delivered. Rather than retard these shipments we have determined to give the public the advantage—to sell out our surplus at prices that mean just cost to us—a vital saving to you.

Our new warehouse, planned to receive these great shipments, has been delayed in its construction. Our old warehouse was removed to make room for the new building. In consequence furniture in reserve had to be removed to our showrooms. The situation is beyond us—the only solution is to move it out with a Great Sale. Such a great value-giving sale that none can resist.

We offer the choice of our entire stock of Fine Furniture and Rugs at prices that will take much of it from the crowded aisles of our store rooms to beautify and dignify your homes—

Out-of-Town Customers.

Will find this the golden opportunity to refurnish your home with fine furniture at prices far less than you have at any time imagined. Make it a point to come to Atlanta—to take advantage while this sale lasts.

We shall not quote figures—that would be difficult—but—

Think of This:

You can buy a suite of furniture or a single piece in this sale---at retail---for the same price we pay in carload lots---wholesale!

This means that we cannot buy again this same furniture, for less than we offer it to you in this sale.

If this statement should sound incredible to some who do not fully understand the reason for such an unprecedented offer, we suggest that you come here and compare and profit by our pressure for the space.

Persons and Events At Press Convention

By Staff Correspondent.

Carrollton, Ga., July 21.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Georgia Press Association, which today completed its regular meeting in Carrollton and began its excursion to north Georgia on an interesting side trip, had scores of little side stories, conventional notes—some notes of protest and some promissory and all notes of more than two and seventy-five per cent interest.

Editor Pat McCutcheon, of the Franklin News and Banner, is attending his thirty-fourth annual convention. This is the thirty-fourth convention. Ergo, Mr. McCutcheon is synonymous, synchronously, continuously unanimous with the association. He is a character; he helped get the charter; he is constitutionally a component part of the original organization, for he was one of the committee which framed the constitution of the association in 1888. He has attended every convention since. One meeting he attended by long distance—before the days of general utility of the wireless. In 1904 he was elected as representative of the Georgia association to attend the National Editorial association in 1905. In 1905 the Georgia meeting at Cordele was changed to get the editors into the territory that was soon to be by aid of the editors and the legislature—Crisp county. Mr. McCutcheon found that on the changed date he would miss the Georgia meeting and break his record—unless the national meeting time was changed. The national meeting was not changed. Mr. McCutcheon went—and on the far western trip the nationals made.

The Georgia convention officially ruled that since Mr. McCutcheon was away on business for the state convention he was not absent. He was away since he was not present to be delivered when the roll was called at Cordele. The Georgia editors made a trip down the east coast of Florida; the nationals went to Los Angeles and then down the Lower California coast. McCutcheon wired at intervals—one of the old-time franks, now out of legal fashion—while the Georgia convention was in session and even on the follow-up trip. From an island in the Pacific he wired the Georgia party which was on an island off the Florida coast—and proved that the Georgia editorial organization not only covers Georgia like the mountain dew, but that it could on occasion slip over both edges of the American continent and take in an Atlantic and a Pacific island at the same time.

Some of the other old-timers, as experience and membership, not age in years, is concerned, are present and some are notably, regrettably absent. Trox Bankston is present as usual, being made an honorary member since he is no longer in the actual tolls of the paper mesh; Walker Coleman is on hand, retaining by a legal, legitimate thread of actual connection with the business. And there are others, too, but the list of officers and committeemen are many who have been long identified with the newspaper game in Georgia.

The daily papers—those of the cities of the state and the smaller cities of the state are well represented. By from one to four representatives the following dailies are here: Atlanta Constitution, Macon Daily Telegraph, Savannah Morning News, Savannah Press, Augusta Journal, Atlanta Georgian, Augusta Chronicle, Athens Banner, Waycross Herald-Journal, Rome Tribune-Herald, Tifton Gazette, Griffin News and Sun, Fitzgerald News, The LaGrange Reporter and possibly one or two others.

Charlie Benna and J. J. Howell claim to be the oldest members of the association next to Pat McCutcheon and Alvin Shackelford, who missed this meeting—the first he has missed in years. More interesting was the contest as to avoid dispute—more heated than the relative claims as to membership age. M. E. Brown, of Holland, and J. J. Howell (who is treasurer and has been treasurer for many years and has been trained down by carrying the enormous funds the association always has on hand) had their pictures taken together—as the heavyweight and lightweight champions. Then along came Duke and Duke. Duke of Griffin, who declared that in entering the lists just prior to the big basket dinner he was far lighter than Treasurer Howell, who was photographedly recorded after he had eaten a big melon after he had partaken of dinner and with several hearty meals occupying prior position ahead of the melon and the meal. Duke, likewise, claimed to be heavier than Brown, because he had in his pocket the hearty invitation of his town, Douglasville, asking the editors to brave the thunderstorms and the rough roads and visit his town whether or no.

L. H. Jenkins and J. A. Pearson, both of Alma, editors and managers of the Times, Bacon county, brought along an extra stomach with them to the convention. They had heard of the wonderful entertainment Carrollton and Carroll county had provided the Thomson barbecue, the fish fry on one side of the county and the all-day meeting with Georgia food on the grounds at the other extreme of the county, with regular meals at hospitable homes scattered along between the extra and super and ultra feeds and eats—and they figured that they would need an extra stomach in any event—either for storage or replacement. That's what they told on them. They protest, however, that they were requested to bring along the stomach to the state laboratories in Atlanta for examination—the organ being one that was to be examined for poison-presence. Their visit to the capitol, however, may have been only to pay Hal Stanley their war tax upon transportation. The actual stomach was not in evidence in Carrollton—nobody really saw it after they left Atlanta, but they had it there and some report that the why of their concealing it here is obvious as the stomach is unobvious.

Politics was barred by the officers of the association and politics was hardly mentioned in the lobby, and on the streets and in the home groups of the meeting. However, the politicians could not be effectively and effectually barred from Carrollton on the occasion of the meeting. Senator Hoke Smith was among those present; former Congressman Adamson, whose home was here, was present and assisted in the entertainment to no small extent.

Senator Shannon had prepared his speech and with a side glance at the senator he declared that the Georgia editors could not be men to fit their jobs if they attended any question, and especially if they did not come out squarely and wholeheartedly in favor of the league of nations. The applause was deafening. Mr. Shannon declared that the presence of the senator senator had nothing to do with his remarks on the league of nations—he had prepared that line of talk before he knew Senator Smith would be present and he would not have illustrated the very point he was making had he not driven home the truth he was trying to impress.

Speaking of Editor Shannon, of the Commerce News: He made the record for speeches in one day. One day and before he had got to luncheon, too, he had addressed two audiences on two widely different subjects—and effectively done the work, without having ever laid claim to being a speaker. He had been invited to speak to a group of Carroll county farmers on drainage question. He comes from the immediate section where great results have been obtained in carrying through drainage projects which have redeemed some of the streams from menace to health, re-claimed them to cultivation, and realized such big crops of corn the first season after the ditches were cut that the bonds to pay for the work were paid off entirely from the profits of that first year's crop of corn. He told of the various projects in Walton, Jackson, Oconee, Madison and other counties of that section.

The convention has been unique in that every officer of the rather long list of the official family were present on the first day and all through the session; every committeeman on every committee, with one exception, was on hand; and every man or woman named on the program was on hand and ready to deliver the goods—except one south Georgia man who sent his son with a good speech in his pocket to take the old editor's place.

Monroe, Walton county, last year set a pace for entertainment of the press gang which declared that it had never in all its then thirty-three years of meetings been accorded such perfect, cordial, sincere, general, generous treatment by the people of any town. Carrollton watched Monroe in every particular—which is saying a great deal for Carrollton, and yet Carrollton easily did the job just as thoroughly and just as easily and smoothly as the Walton county capital.

Just as if Carrollton had been entertaining press conventions every year since the county was created in 1826 and had improved each year. Nothing was left undone—and so many things were thought of for the comfort and pleasure of the newspaper folks that to have left none of them undone was a piece of work unsurpassed.

For example: The train bringing the big bunch was an hour or more late; it was raining; hot sunburn in a hundred homes were being kept warm; the night meeting was called off—on the train; and the crowd of several hundred was to be delivered to the host homes over the pretty little city. A line of automobiles was waiting at the station; delegates were told to simply walk along the line and drop into any machine and show a card bearing the name of the host. One delegate saw that line of machines; for the sake of experiment he decided to take the farthest automobile from the station—he walked and walked past three hundred cars and finally getting into the last car—found that he was at the very door of his host's.

Everything was done. Just that way—completely! D. G. B.

The next president will be inaugurated on a Friday.

NEW ORLEANS STRIKE WILL BE ARBITRATED

New Orleans, July 24.—Striking union street car men today voted to accept an agreement offered late between the president of their local and the federal receiver for the New Orleans Railway and Light company by which the men return to work and leave all questions at issue to three conciliators. The men will return tomorrow.

The men have been on strike since July 1. Partial service has been maintained by the street car company under direction of the United States district court. Non-union men from other cities have operated the cars under protection of special deputy United States marshals.

The men went on strike when their demands for 46 per cent salary increases were refused.

Under the terms agreed to three conciliators will be chosen by officers of the carmen's union and federal receiver. The conciliators must be approved by the federal judge, who in the event of failure of others to select them, will himself make the appointments. Salary increases should the conciliators decide on them, will be retroactive from tomorrow until the decision is made.

The New Orleans Railway and Light company, a subsidiary of the American Cities company, went into federal receivership during the war.

To the Voters of the City of Atlanta in the Primary to Be Held July 28, 1920:

Since announcing my candidacy for re-election as Alderman from the Ninth Ward, I have been confined to my bed by serious illness. My physician tells me that for me to undertake any work of any kind for the next ten days would probably be at the risk of my life. I, therefore, cannot write to my friends, nor, of course, see any of them in the interest of my candidacy. I must, therefore, ask the help of my friends and those who know me in this way. In my first term as Alderman, I have done my best for my Ward and for all the City—my record is before you. If I have served you satisfactorily in my first term, I beg your endorsement for a second one, and will promise to do all that I can to serve every interest of the City to the best of my ability, should I again be permitted to represent you.

Asking your support and assuring you of my appreciation for anything you may do in my behalf, I am,

Yours sincerely,
Warren D. White

VETERANS OF 82ND TO MEET TUESDAY

Club Will Be Organized and Plans Made for Entertainment of the "All American" Division in Fall.

Atlanta ex-members of the Eighty-second division are planning the formation of a club, and will meet in the assembly hall of the Atlanta chamber of commerce at 8 o'clock Tuesday night for definite organization. Those who have planned the session urge that all men who served with the division at any time during its existence be present at the meeting and bring with them all others who are entitled to membership.

One of the objects of the meeting Tuesday night is to prepare plans for a reunion of the entire "All American" division to be held in Atlanta some time during the month of October. It is believed by those who have discussed the plan that some time during the first two weeks of the month will be the most appropriate time for such a convocation of the division, since such a date will include the anniversary of the hottest fighting seen by the division during the whole period of its overseas service.

October 11 has been suggested as a date which should be included in the reunion's extent, because it was on that day in 1918 that the entire division was in the rush through the Argonne. On October 6, 1918, the 164th infantry brigade of the division "jumped off" into the thickest of the battle through the forest, and was joined on the 10th by the 163d brigade. By the 11th the entire division was in action—where it stayed, or what remained, until late in the first week of November.

Permanent organization will be effected of the Atlanta club Tuesday night, and invitations will be extended to other clubs which have already been formed throughout the country to participate in the reunion. William A. Simon, who is entitled to wear the French cross of the legion of honor and the American distinguished service medal as a result of his part in the Eighty-second's service, has been chosen as temporary chairman for the gathering Tuesday night.

A Tire for $1
A Tube for 1c

Sale Begins Monday Morning, July 26th, and will be Continued for a Limited Time

Among the many Favorite makes are "Blemished" or "Seconds" of FISKS, FIRESTONES, FEDERAL, NORWALK, McGRAW, McLEAN, CARLISLE and others. Also many Brands of First Tires.

Pre-eminent as a merchandising event!—A distribution of Tires and Tubes in a money-saving occasion without an equal in the history of the Rubber Industry. Doubly sensational is this sale, because of the present high prices for rubber, fabric and labor, all of which means that another increase in the present prices of Tires and Tubes is a foregone conclusion, and that the increase must become effective in the near future.

This is a "Combination Sale" of Tires and Tubes. Therefore, to get a Tire at $1 and a Tube at 1c, it is necessary to buy a tire and tube at the list price.

Among the Tubes Offered

"Seconds"

A vicar was bothered by the postman not only reading his postcards, but communicating their information. One day he wrote a postcard to a medical friend who lived at said. "I would tell you more only I know the postman will read it." Then he put the card in the mailbox, whence it was collected, taken to the postoffice, and sent out for delivery.

The postman stamped into the vicar's kitchen with the card, threw it on the table, and exclaimed, "He's a liar! I don't read 'em."—Tit-Bits.

THE IMPROVED INSTRUMENT BOARD

A Feature of the New Series Haynes

YOU easily depress the small lever (A) at the left—and the velvety-powered Haynes engine with its dependable force and strength in reserve, is in motion, softly humming in readiness to propel your new series Haynes.

Quick control of any part of the lighting system is secured by depressing the small lever (B) at the right.

Observe the picture of the modernly equipped and conveniently arranged instrument board of the new series Haynes. The simplifying refinements bring the starting and lighting of the car literally to your fingertips. This is just one of the desirable and outstanding features of the new series Haynes—one suggestion of the many approved ideas and developments which are incorporated in the new series Haynes.

car. Through these refinements the name Haynes has become synonymous with character.

The new series Haynes cars embody and portray in every way the four essential factors of car-character—beauty, strength, power and comfort.

The lustrous aluminum body, with its lasting and mirror-like finish, the sturdy chassis and rugged mechanism, and the deep leather upholstery of the wide, roomy and comfortable seats—all these are carefully and scientifically harmonized to the point that leaves nothing further to be desired in the new series Haynes.

Such excellence as is offered to-day in the new series Haynes naturally creates a desire that commands every facility of our great new factories.

LENINE FAVORS

WORLD REVOLT

Soviet Premier Says That Is Aim of Third Internationale—League of Nations Called Failure.

Moscow, July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Nikolai Lenin, the Soviet premier, speaking at the opening session of the third internationale Monday, stated that the world's economic crisis and the failure of the league of nations to reconcile and unite the interests of capitalistic governments were the most important factors promoting the aims of the third internationale, one of which was to consolidate and organize world revolution.

After Lenin's address in which he declared, among other things, that the entire capitalistic system of the world was threatened with collapse and that the league of nations contributed the internationale adopted a resolution calling on the workers of all nations to institute an economic blockade of Poland.

Cost of Living and Wages. Lenin pointed out that even in countries where there were the most favorable conditions, such as America, Japan and England, the increase in the cost of living was disproportionate to the rise in wages and declared that those who benefited in all countries were an infinitely small proportion of the population.

The collapse of the entire capitalistic system was threatened, Lenin said, owing to the impossibility of settling war debts without involving many countries in economic ruin and because of the hopelessness of reconstruction under a capitalistic regime. English economists, such as Kent, he declared, had already advanced the idea that annulment of war debts was necessary for the re-establishment of international credit.

The deportation of 500 communists from America would not help the capitalistic regime while need among the laboring classes was increasing and capitalists were continuing to enrich themselves at the expense of the workers, the premier continued, the working masses were ripe for a broad revolutionary movement and the task of the internationale was to consolidate and organize world revolutions, he said.

League of Nations Split.

The league of nations, a prey to internal dissensions, had furnished no protection to small nationalities, he asserted, and the imperialistic governments, in pursuance of selfish interests, were placing the defeated nations in the position of colonies. Lenin cited the differences that had arisen with regard to the fate of Turkey. Thus, he said, the activities of the league of nations, had facilitated the work of the communist internationale.

The premier pointed to the representation in the internationale for the first time of colonies, dependencies and "oppressed nations," which, he declared, was significant. Experience was proving, he added, that non-capitalistic countries, such as those of Asia, were fertile fields for soviet doctrines.

Regarding internal organization Lenin asserted that the social democrats were the most serious obstacle to the development of revolutionary power as a means of service to all countries, as it had been shown they were the enemies of the working class and defenders of the bourgeoisie. It would be an easier task, he said, to unify the left wing of the socialistic movement and rectify mistakes in the proletarian campaign by the adoption of a program of united action.

AUTO DRIVER IS HELD FOR INJURY TO GIRL

C. J. Hambree, of Woodlawn avenue, who was driving the automobile that struck and seriously injured Lucy Mae Edwards, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Edwards, of 18 Ponders avenue, on July 14, was held by Recorder Johnson for trial in the state courts under $500 bond. The injured girl sustained a fractured skullbone and is still in a critical condition at an Atlanta hospital. The accident occurred on Marietta street near Ponders avenue.

Romance in Life of Chairman Named By the Democrats

If George White Can Win an Election Like He Can Win a Girl, Good Night Harding.

By R. E. POWELL.

Washington, July 24.—There is a bit of romance in the life of the new chairman of the Democratic national committee which reminds one of the more or less popular war song: "If He Can Fight Like He Can Love, Goodnight, Germany." If George White's intimate friends are to be believed, this title ought to be revised to read: "If he can win an election like he can win a girl, goodnight, Harding."

According to a member of the committee who spent a long while in conference with Governor Cox and Mr. White Tuesday, the new chairman has the tenacity of a bulldog, the persistence of a book agent and is as much of a diplomat as a French commissioner sent over here to borrow a few million dollars from such an exchequer of the treasury as Carter Glass. He is aggressive in seven languages.

The story is just going the rounds about White's romance that sent him to the Klondike when the gold craze was on. As it was told by this particular member of the committee, who got it straight from Governor Cox, it is:

Story of the Romance.
George White was very much in love with a girl in his home town in Ohio. She was attending a boarding school and he was back home plugging along without doing anything to cause the stock market to cut up capers. He decided that he could make better progress if he were married and, feeling satisfied about the girl, he went to talk it over with her father, the croesus of the village.

"You can marry her when you have made $100,000," the stern old gentleman is said to have informed George. And this blow came in the days when $100,000 seemed to young White to represent at least half as much money as there was in the United States treasury.

The ultimatum of the father was accepted and, good sportsman that he proved himself to be, White folded his belongings in a blanket and headed for Bob Service up north. His way westward carried him by the boarding school where his future wife was a student and to her he reported the paternal view of the situation and, unfolded his plans to make good.

Naturally, she protested and with mingled affection and youthful buoyancy expressed a desire to appeal from the decision of her father. White, however, had made up his mind and he left his home town sweetheart with a promise that he would bring home the bacon.

The rest of the story is national history, how he "struck it rich" in the Klondike and came back to claim his girl. It took him three years in the "great unknown," but in those three years he multiplied the sum which his prospective father-in-law had said he must accumulate before marrying his daughter. That is exactly what Governor Cox, Franklin D. Roosevelt and thousands of other democrats expect him to do on November 2, next—"bring home the bacon." He was picked from a wealth of material and with a view of getting the man who can put enough "punch" in the organized campaign to keep pace with the drive toward the White House so well started by Governor Cox.

White in Accord With Wilson.
Possible the most ludicrous comment emanating from the republican camp and directed at the democratic chiefs is the subtle charge that Chairman Cummings and his committee and White chosen to succeed him in order that Governor Cox might get from under the White House blessing of last Sunday.

The truth is that White was picked largely because he is in "complete accord" with the views of the president. The White House is elated over his selection and the president has generally been credited with winning him over to the democratic party while he was a student at Princeton in 1893.

White's allegiance when he entered the president's class at Princeton was to the principles of the G. O. P.

"My father and all the members of my family were republicans and to Woodrow Wilson I went to go the credit for my having espoused the democratic cause," the new chairman used to tell his colleagues in the sixty-second, sixty-third and sixty-fifth sessions of which he was a member.

Democratic politicians in Washington generally agree that the selection of White is fortunate for the ticket this fall. It is an aggressive ticket, they believe, championed by an aggressive campaign manager.
Homer Cummings will be held in store for his stronger forte, that of stump speaking. The national committee will fairly pepper the country with good speakers this fall. The number available runs into the thousands and practically all of them will be used either at home or, in cases like that of Tom Harkin, where the democratic candidate has no serious opposition, the speaker will be sent into the east and west.

INCREASE IN OUTPUT IN GARDEN TRUCK

Washington, July 24.—Fruits, vegetables and all forms of garden truck are now on markets in supplies between 10 and 15 per cent greater during the same period in 1919, the United States bureau of markets reported today. The movement to consuming markets by railroad the bureau estimates, is now 2,000 cars a day, and as much more normally comes to the larger centers by truck and local haulage.
"Contrary to the general impression among consumers," the bureau declares, "wholesale prices of fruits and vegetables are not now higher than last year. Potatoes are an important exception, being still about $2 per barrel higher than in most other years ago."
Notwithstanding, the potato prices have been dropping rapidly, the review continued, in the face of increasing supplies from all sections.

SEASON IN LONDON FOR METROPOLITAN

New York, July 24.—The Metropolitan Opera company is considering a six weeks' season in London next year, it was learned in musical circles here today. The proposed trip is to be made, it was said, following the usual week in Atlanta, at the close of the New York season.

RAISE IN WATER RATES LAID TO MAYOR KEY

Claims Credit He Does Not Deserve, Asserts Harry Goodhart.

Declaring that Mayor Key, the self-proclaimed champion of the people as against raises in the rates of public utilities corporations, had himself caused a raise in the rates of one public utility that he, as mayor, controlled, in that he had raised the water rates from 50 cents with a 10 per cent discount for prompt payment to 50 cents flat with a 10 per cent added for penalty on all bills of which payment was delayed, and that he had raised the rates for consumers of 1,000 feet or more of water to a dollar, Harry Goodhart carried his fight for the mayor's life into the second and third wards last night, speaking to crowds averaging between 200 and 300 people. Each gathering was apparently hostile to him when he opened his address, but each gave him a respectful hearing, warmed considerably to his straightforward, earnest arguments and applauded him generously when he had concluded.

The first meeting was held in the third ward at the corner of South Boulevard and Gaskill street, and was conducted by Harvey Baker, superintendent of the Fulton Bag and Cotton mills, an institution that employed the candidate at the beginning of his business career some twenty years ago. Basil Stockbridge and State Senator Ivan Allen preceded the candidate with short addresses.

The Credit for Schools.
"Mr. Key claims credit for taking the schools out of politics," said the speaker, "but it was the women who did that by forming the Parents' Teacher association. Mr. Key now claims he did it, but in fact he fought the women at that time."
"He also proclaimed when elected that he would prevent the power company from raising its rates, but it has raised them just the same, for we now have 6-cent fares instead of 5-cent ones. He says that the sewer department now has work in hand, but he does not say that I went before the finance committee and got it for the sewers. He did not do it."

"As a matter of fact, neither the mayor nor the council have anything to do with the raising of rates. That is strictly the province of the railroad commission. But if I am elected mayor, I promise to protect the interests of the people, to make every public service corporation for the mark and make them give the best service to be had without raising their rates unless such a raise is ordered by the railroad commission."

"A political ring or gang is now in control of the city hall, of which the mayor is the head. I do not mean to include the employees of the city hall, or the police, fire or other departments in this gang, but I mean the bunch of professional politicians that sit around without drawing salaries and boss the work of the employees and the men doing the city's work. This is the alliance that the mayor has formed and which is playing cheap politics."

The second ward meeting camped on the steps of the Georgia Avenue school and was presided over by F. B. Florence, who aroused considerable enthusiasm among the crowd by a ringing eulogy of the candidate. Henry A. Foster, Stockbridge and Allen preceded Mr. Goodhart, who, in addition to his previous arguments, referred to the recent appointment of the city's purchasing agent.

"This agent buys a million and a half dollars' worth of supplies for the city annually," said the candidate, "and when he resigned during last winter, the mayor attempted to install one of his pets in this most important office, a man by the name of Martin. A committee was appointed, consisting of the mayor, the comptroller, the chairman of the finance committee and myself, to investigate the records of the applicant for the position."
"We found that Martin had been nothing but a clerk in the post office for the last 17 years and had never bought anything but supplies for his family. A Camp Gordon captain, who had had a great deal of experience in purchasing supplies, applied for the place but the mayor chose his agent in the waste basket. Mr. West, Mr. Orme and I then picked Mr. Landers for the place, but the mayor made a majority report against him, and when we went to the council we beat the mayor by one vote. But that's the kind of a mayor that you have favoring his friends at the expense of the government."

A big rally at the city auditorium is planned by the Goodhart campaign committee on Monday night, at which not only the candidate but a number of other speakers will also speak. The names of whom will be announced in tomorrow's papers.
The campaign will be closed Tuesday night with two meetings in the first ward and one in the eighth, where Mr. Goodhart resides. The first will open at 7:30 p. m. at the corner of Chestnut and Kennedy streets, the second at 8 o'clock at Hemphill and Tenth streets, and the third at 8:30 at the corner of Peachtree and Fifteenth.

NOYES SAYS AMERICA SHOULD HELP EUROPE

New York, July 24.—Self interest requires that the United States should help out in the great crisis of Europe, according to Pierrepont Noyes, who, with Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, of San Francisco, and Wallace Day, all-American members of the Inter-Allied Rhineland commission, arrived here today on the Baltic. Mr. Noyes is going directly to Washington to report on his work on the Rhineland commission. Conditions in Europe are very bad, he said.
"The only one of the war countries that is really getting on is Belgium," he added. "There they buckled down to repair the ravages of the invasion. France is making no progress. The French policy now is purely military, not through any inherent love of militarism, but through fear of Germany. With all the hatred of Germany which was the heritage of 1918, there was always present the element of fear. A fact of which the Kaiser's government was cognizant, and upon which it worked. Now that Germany is prostrate the fear still lingers in the French heart and France can see no comfort until it is assured its enemy is bound or foot."

Regarding the position of the United States, Mr. Noyes said: "Our self-interest necessitates our helping out in the great crisis. There can be no stoppage of the world machinery in so vast an area as that in Europe without our having to pay a large part of the penalty, but we are paying it and will continue to have to pay it in increasing volume the longer we continue to disregard our duty and our interest."

How Much Gas Across Continent?

Automobile Industry Is Keenly Interested in 3,300-Mile Economy Contest. 25 Drivers—Eleven States Unusual Relay Run to Prove Economy and Stamina Will Be Made by an Overland.

To determine for the automobile industry and the motor buying public the comparative merits of the light-weight car as regards its stamina and economy in a continued run of 3,300 miles with a relay of 25 drivers at the wheel, a transcontinental economy run was started from New York at midnight Sunday, July 18th. The car will travel day and night continuously until at the end of the journey it noses its way down Market street in San Francisco. During the entire trip only 30 stops will be made, and these at public filling stations where new drivers and more gasolines will be taken on.

Up until the Tuesday afternoon the car had covered eight states, arriving at Kearney, Nebraska, which is 1,700 miles from New York, or one-half way across the continent. The car has accomplished this distance across country only a few hours behind the trains westward, yet no speed record is being sought. The test is being made to determine the best the light-weight car can do under the most adverse conditions for the transcontinental run. For it already has been driven by fifteen different men, none of whom has ever sat at the wheel of this Overland. It will have 25 strange drivers before the run is over.

It is because of this constant succession of relay of drivers that the economy record of the Overland challenges public attention. The car has been punished under good driving and bad, over roads rough and torn, at times slippery with mud and rain.

Despite this, the Overland has made these remarkable economy records. From Pittsburgh to Lima, O., it averaged 30 miles to the gallon over hill country. From Lima to South Bend, Ind., the average was 26 miles to the gallon. From South Bend to Cedar Rapids, Ia., the car averaged 27 miles to the gallon.

For the entire distance of 1,700 miles, 68½ gallons of gasoline were consumed for an average of 24½ miles to the gallon. Daily reports are being recorded on chart displayed in show room windows of the local branch of the Willlys-Overland, Inc., 469 Peachtree street, where many interested car owners are constantly calling for latest reports.—Adv.

Southern Motors Has Been Built Through The Co-Operation of Southern People

This is the plan of the Southern Motors Manufacturing Association's factories as now being developed at the port of Houston, Texas. A number of these units have been completed and in production for months. Others are under way.

Southern Motors Manufacturing Association manufactures Ranger Automobiles, Trucks, Tractors, Trailers and Commercial Bodies. For distribution and dealer territory, catalogs, prices and details, write us.

A DOMINANT factor in the progress of Southern Motors has been its Associate Trustees, members of the official organization who perform their duties in the communities in which they live.

Each state is allotted its share of associate Trusteeships, and appointments have been made from among shareholders in these states whose integrity, influence and business ability qualify them to fill these important positions most profitably to the other shareholders of the Association.

The duties of an associate Trustee of Southern Motors are:

First: To give to the President of the Board of Trustees and other officers of the Association his personal co-operation to the end of the completion of the Ranger factories now planned and under construction and in operation.

Second: To suggest, recommend and assist in passing upon the qualifications of State and District Distributors, Local Dealers, Branch Service Managers, Parts Carriers, and other local employees and representatives of the Association.

Third: To make special report to the President of the Board on any additional subjects which may arise or be submitted by the Board from time to time.

Fourth: To perform the functions of a local correspondent or adviser or advisory representative in the immediate local community.

Fifth: By all proper and consistent means, either in connection with its Agents, Officers, Trustees or otherwise, to promote the welfare of the Association.

The fitness of the men now holding the associate Trusteeships and their faithful performance of their duties is demonstrated by the present success of the organization. These officials have been largely instrumental in creating good will, sales and prosperity for Southern Motors. They have made possible the rapid establishment of our selling organization and aided in securing the proper agents for conducting the affairs of the Association throughout the Southern States.

The various phases of the development of Southern Motors Manufacturing Association, Ltd., are being set forth in a series of articles, another of which will appear in this paper next Sunday.

The Rugged Endurance of a

MAXWELL

is traced to its Special Steels

A dollar travels a long distance in a Maxwell. For its steels last. They stand terrific road shocks. They seldom fracture. They outlive the ordinary steels.

They are made to Maxwell's own formulae, developed from thousands of laboratory tests and countless miles on the road.

They make possible the ideal construction of great strength with light weight.

The tendency today is toward light weight, the elimination of useless pounds.

It makes for better motoring. It saves money in car operation. It makes possible greater acceleration, quicker brake action, less repairs, a higher average road speed, and lower initial cost.

Maxwell, with its special steels to give not only light weight but rugged endurance, has won an ever increasing number of friends. To date nearly 400,000. In another year 100,000 more.

South to Grow More Grain This Year

Some Factors in Successful Production

By F. H. JETER

Agricultural Editor, Soil Improvement Committee.

Indications are that southern farmers are more interested than ever before in the growing of grain. This is largely due to the fact that the climate of the section permits the production of grain crops during the winter months and also that the land in winter means a loss in potential wealth. The fact that the great demand for greater grain production, recent figures issued by the United States department of agriculture show that the cost of producing wheat in the southern grain belts of the midwest has been greatly increased, so much so that many farmers on their crop last year. It is figured that with the mild climate of the south and the quick response of its soils to good methods of farming that the southern farmer can produce wheat at a profit.

This profit is assured where heavy yields are made per acre by the use of good seed, proper soil preparation, and liberal fertilization. It is felt by many progressive farmers of the southeast that the south has really been overlooking a big opportunity to increase its grain production. The wheat, oats or rye put in after some of the summer crops have been grown and harvested are ready to take off the next spring and produce a valuable crop as corn, cowpeas, sorghum and some of the other "range crops."

Of all the grain crops, wheat is now the most important. There is no doubt but that all produced can be used at home to good advantage for making bread and other foodstuffs. It is also a good crop for the south, being readily adapted to the work of stock. While rye is not so greatly used in the south, it performs an important function as a winter cover crop and will aid in the building up and renovation of worn soils.

Need of Foodstuffs. For food, however, the great need is for more wheat. There is no doubt but that the acreage should be continually increased if the world is to be supplied with bread. Because the south happened into the growing of cotton, some farmers have devoted themselves to its cultivation so assiduously that they have not had the time to give to other equally important crops that would aid in making the cotton really the money crop that it should be.

It has been proved beyond all doubt that wheat can be produced abundantly in the south if given the proper attention. It is a crop that lends itself well to some of the best rotations which should be practiced in the south. It comes off the land in the spring or early summer in time for a good crop of some legume such as cowpeas, to be put back, thus aiding in the improvement of the soil.

At present there is a shortage of labor on the farms. According to present indications, there never will again be the available supply at the price paid for farm labor before the great war. Wheat is a crop that can be planted and handled with a minimum of labor. The boll weevil has now about covered the entire south, making it imperative that those who grow cotton put in only that acreage which can be handled to best advantage on the boll weevil. Many farmers are looking for other crops to use on this remaining acreage after making the restrictions in cotton. If at least part of this land can be planted to wheat in the fall, this followed by some legume in the spring, and then cut for hay for more live stock, a good start is made towards a system of diversification.

By growing wheat and other food crops at home the cotton is left as actual profit when sold. The selling of high-priced cotton on any farm to buy high-priced flour and meat means that no considerable advancement has been made. When wheat for the flour, hay, meat, vegetables, fruit and corn are grown in addition to cotton, then the high-priced staple is profit.

Methods of Preparing the Land. Wheat is generally supposed to be a cold weather plant, but exceptions can be found to this in the case of Egypt and California. For the south, it gives best returns when planted in the fall. Some growers break their land thoroughly after taking some spring crop from the land and then allow it to lie fallow for the remainder of the summer, harrowing at intervals to keep down weeds. In this manner the soil is in fine condition with a firm seed bed and the surface soil is later put into condition by harrowing, thus finely pulverizing the soil particles for the reception of the seed.

Other growers do not plow the land but follow some summer crop with wheat after a thorough harrowing. This is true in the case of wheat after corn. Not many of the most successful farmers use the same plan in preparing their land. Different methods must be used on different soils and under different conditions. For one thing, however, to be successful with the crop in every case, the seed bed must be firm with the upper three or four inches in a mellow, finely pulverized condition ready for the seed. This is accomplished by the fact that a great mass of some green crop should not be plowed under just previous to planting. This will cause the seed bed to be porous, to dry out quickly, and will prevent the passage of water from the lower soil to the surface by capillary action. When the plowing is done too near the time of planting, some of the best growers use a roller to firm the bed. This is to be recommended in dry seasons as it firms down the seed bed and makes more certain the contact of the seed with the soil water.

Fertilizers to Use.

Wheat needs fertile land. To make the largest yields the crop should be planted on the best soil of the farm. The rich clays and the heavier loams in the case of the sandy sections, give the best returns. Limestone soils are known to be good where the crops are sandy soils may give returns in a profitable season when the land has been properly put into condition. Unless well fertilized, however, poor results will be secured under any condition. It will be well to use as much well rotted manure as can be secured. In the mind that this is an unbalanced plant food containing largely the element, nitrogen, which will produce stalks and vine at the expense of the seed.

A commercial fertilizer mixture analyzing from 8 to 9 per cent available phosphoric acid, 2 to 3 per cent nitrogen, and 3 to 4 per cent potash will give good results. This should be applied according to the richness or fertility of the land. From 250 to 500 pounds per acre is the usual application where the wheat has followed a crop that has been well fertilized. It is believed that not less than 500 pounds should be applied per acre for best results. This will insure the grain being plump and well filled and will to some extent prevent lodging by producing healthier, stronger stalks. Along in the spring there comes a time when the wheat begins to look a little yellow and off-color. Then is the time for a top dressing of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia. These should be applied just when the wheat begins to make its first attempt at spring growth and should be used at the rate of at least 100 pounds per acre.

When to Plant. The best time to plant wheat is at that time in the fall when the young plants will have enough time to make sufficient growth to withstand the winter, but not so early as to be liable to the attacks of numerous insect pests, the principal one being the Hessian fly. Planting dates have been worked out by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the different experiment stations, and the date for any particular section can be determined by writing to the experiment station at any state college or department of agriculture. Generally it is best to wait until the first killing frost anyway. It has been definitely determined that different planting dates will have an effect on the yield. From the middle of October to the middle of December will include most dates used in the southern states. It must be remembered that the wheat ought to have a good start before freezing weather begins.

Of the different methods of planting advocated, the drill method seems to give better yields than when the seed is sown broadcast. This is particularly true if the section is subjected to freezing weather in the winter. Alternate thawing and freezing will push the young plants out of the ground and kill many of them when the seed is sown broadcast. Most up-to-date farmers are now equipped with a seed drill having either the small discs or the small plows. These can be used for planting and distributing the fertilizer at the same time. Where there is not a drill machine available, the fall-furrow method of plowing and planting as close as possible to each preceding row with a small tongue plow may be used to better advantage than by sowing the seed broadcast.

Amount of Seed to Use. The amount of seed to use varies. Good heavy seed will germinate better and grow off more quickly in light, trashy seed. Where weather conditions are favorable and the planting has been done in time, not as much seed is required as where a large percentage of the plants will be winter-killed. When planted lightly, the young plants will be better able to stand the winter. On the average, comparing all years, at least five pecks of seed are used per acre. On fertile land and when wanted early from one to two pecks have been known to give satisfactory results. Where the seed is broadcasted more should be used than where the wheat is drilled and in this latter case at least six to eight pecks are used.

To be successful in wheat production and to eliminate smut disease, most growers treat their seed with a solution of about one pound of sodium borate to five gallons of water. The seed may be immersed in this solution for ten minutes, then stand in the bag or basket to drain for another ten minutes, then spread out to dry. Where the seed is broadcasted more should be used than where the wheat is drilled and in this latter case at least six to eight pecks are used.

Varieties Recommended. There are an untold number of varieties of wheat. Some of them have been old-time, tried varieties given a new and high-sounding name to promote the sale of the seed. There are some pedigreed varieties, however, that are excellent for the different localities. The different experiment stations of the south have worked out the best for the different sections of the various states and it is best to apply to them for definite information. Two types are generally used in the south at this time, the bearded and the smooth. The smooth varieties give the larger yields in an average of years, but the bearded varieties are generally the more certain to make a crop under adverse conditions. The North Carolina experiment station has found that in the high altitudes Leas's Prolific, Purple Straw and Bearded Fulcraster yield about the same. All are good standard varieties and give excellent returns when properly handled.

There are many other varieties grown locally or handled by seedsmen of the different communities. Some of these will give better results than those brought from a distance and it is well to give the best of them a trial before ordering from another distant section.

The fundamentals of wheat growing, therefore, may be summed up in the use of a good seed bed, pure seed free from disease, and the crop well fertilized to produce maximum yields.

THE "MOBILE" STEAMER of 1901

PIONEERS

IN THE summer of 1901 the first automobile—a "Mobile" Steamer—arrived in Atlanta. It came in a wooden box not unlike a dry goods packing case.

Those who unpacked and assembled it had never seen an automobile before—but the thing ran, and convinced those who saw it that the "horseless" carriage was a success—though in need of much improvement—and refinement.

Among those who helped to unpack and assemble this "car" was a young fellow who has been constantly connected with the automotive industry since that time—and has been intimately connected with it—through fair and stormy times—in its march of progress from this crude machine to the wonderful cars of today.

Experience is a wonderfully efficient teacher—and the knowledge gained through all these years of acquaintance with all branches of the automobile business enables this "young fellow" to recognize merit in auto accessories—to fully understand and appreciate your difficulties—and to help you in many ways to secure the utmost service and comfort of your car.

WHITEHALL BUILDING WILL COST $250,000

Work Will Begin Monday on Two-Story Brick Business Structure.

Work will begin Monday on the erection of a two-story brick building on the property at 557-561 Whitehall street, the structure to cost approximately $250,000. Ben J. Massell, local realty man and contractor, is the builder, and the space in the new building will be occupied by the Columbia Graphophone company and the Southern Electric Supply company.

Leases have already been signed by the two concerns. The lease of the graphophone company was handled by Frank Malone, of the Ford rest & George Adair Realty company, and the lease of the electric equipment house through S. P. Cronheim, of Smith & Ewing. The lot upon which the new building will be raised is 150 by 200 feet, and faces Stewart avenue. It is expected that the structure will be ready for occupancy January 1.

LABOR DAY PROGRAM WILL BE BEST EVER

"From all indications, the Labor day celebration this year will be the best ever held here," W. C. Caraway, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, who announced Saturday that a meeting of the general Labor day committee will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Labor temple, for the purpose of discussing plans for the coming events. The general Labor day committee, of which President Caraway is chairman, holds a meeting once a week, and will continue to do so until after Labor day, which comes this year on Monday, September 6. The committee consists of representatives of all locals affiliated with the Atlanta Federation of Trades and the four local brotherhoods.

A gala holiday is planned. At Lakewood park an all-day program of various activities will be provided for the general public, and a feature of the day will be the customary downtown parade, which will perhaps be the biggest in the history of Labor days in Atlanta.

Eighth Ward Leads In the Registration Of Atlanta Women

Final tabulation of the women's registration figures for the primary of July 28 were completed by City Registrar Walter Taylor on Saturday afternoon and show a total of 2,239 women qualified to vote in the election. The books closed last Tuesday afternoon and a number of clerks have been busy since arranging the lists and arriving at the ward totals.

The eighth ward with 599 women registered leads the list, followed next by the ninth ward with 303, the sixth with 273 and the third with 254. The registration by wards is as follows: First ward, 21; second ward, 224; third ward, 254; fourth ward, 137; fifth ward, 64; sixth ward, 273; seventh ward, 229; eighth ward, 599; ninth ward, 303; tenth ward, 87; eleventh ward, 36.

INDIANA Trucks built 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 years ago, have hundred-thousand mile service records and better—and are still doing the same hard work today.

No matter how much you pay or how little, no trucks will give you more service—carry more tons—more miles for more years than INDIANA Trucks.

10 year records of 100,000 miles and more are the strongest evidence that can be produced that INDIANA Trucks will deliver more ton-miles per dollar invested than any trucks in the world.

Facts you should know about truck selection are contained in our unique analysis, "How to Choose a Motor Truck"—ask us for a copy.

ESTAVER RETURNS TO LOCAL "ROW" TO HANDLE VELIE

Wm. A. Estaver, Who For Several Years Has Been In Auto Business in Jacksonville, Returns To Atlanta to Distribute Velie Cars.

WELL KNOWN ON AUTO ROW

Mr. Estaver Was the First Man to Climb Stone Mountain in an Automobile. Formerly With Old Maxwell Organization.

BY O. J. WILLOUGHBY,
Auto Editor The Constitution.

One of the latest additions to the local automobile row is the Estaver Sales Company, at 170 West Peachtree street. This company will distribute Velie automobiles and trucks in Georgia and Florida. The Jacksonville office of this company has handled Velie cars in Florida for the past five years, and the addition of Georgia to their territory is a mark of the admirable success which this company has experienced in Florida.

William A. Estaver, who heads this company, was formerly connected with the automobile business in Atlanta and is well known here. He was for a long time connected with the old Maxwell-Bricco organization here, back in the days when a two-cylinder car was a wonder.

In fact, Mr. Estaver, driving an old "two-lunger" successfully climbed Stone Mountain the first time. This has been many years, but he has been closely allied with the automobile business ever since.

His success in Jacksonville, and all of Florida, with the Velie and other lines of cars has been consistent with his years in the business. Every year has found him a little further advanced in his standing in the industry, and it is only logical that the Velie factory should choose him to handle the Velie agency in Georgia when it became vacant.

What Brought Success.
In speaking of the success with which he has met in the automobile business in the past few years, Mr. Estaver is extremely modest. He feels that his success has been only natural, and well he might for in the course of his conversation with me he gave the theory on which his business has been founded. It was simply this: "Success in the automobile business comes through the stock room and the service station."

No truer statement could hardly be made, and it is no wonder that his success has been so consistent through the years.

Velie owners will doubtless be glad to learn that the local Velie organization has such a policy behind it and that its motto is: "Service With a Smile."

"There is no empty motto, either," says Mr. Estaver. "Every man in my organization must believe in, and actually live up to this motto. It is the foundation of a greater success."

Some of His Associates.
Mr. Estaver will devote his time exclusively to his automobile business, as he has in the past, but will in the future, divide his time between the Atlanta and Jacksonville offices.

Mr. S. K. Cowan, a thoroughly trained and experienced automobile man, and a man who thoroughly understands Mr. Estaver's policies, will be active manager of the Atlanta office, thus insuring the execution of his policies to the letter.

Mr. Estaver, himself a young man has attempted to bring into his organization the brains and service of other young men who have proven their worth and soundness of judgment. Apparently, he has just such a man in Mr. Cowan, as well as in Harry Russ, his service manager.

Mr. Russ is conceded to be a thoroughly reliable mechanic of unusual skill and ability, as well as having a reputation of integrity and conscientious service.

Velie Model 48

The Authoritative Style

Its popularity is now one of the familiar stories of the motoring world. Its snappy body design instantly won for it the title of "The Authoritative Style"—and its powerful motor, burning low-grade fuel, is giving performance in keeping with its beauty. Five models, open and closed. Here is distinction—individuality—quality. Let us demonstrate this beautiful car for you.

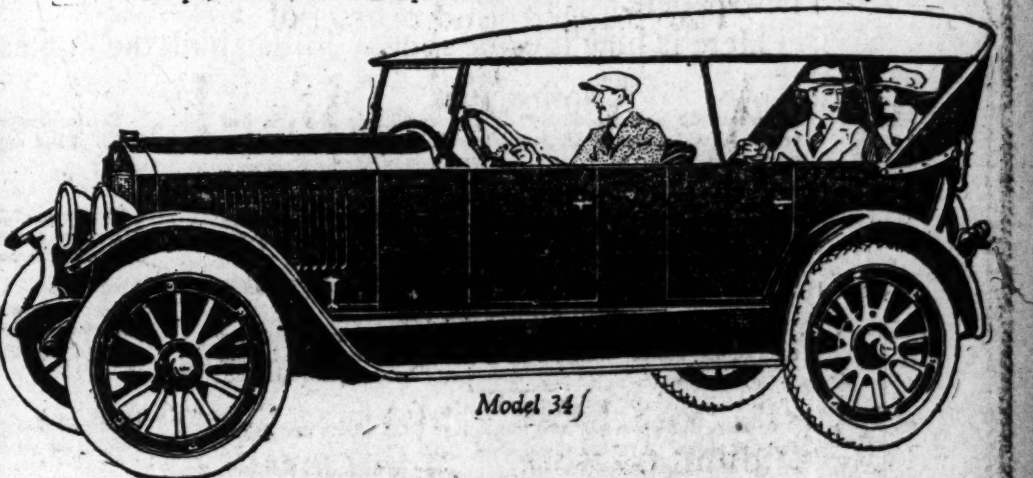

Model 48 Velie Touring Car. There are five models of this line: Touring, Sedan, Coupe, Roadster and Speedster—All in the Authoritative Style.

Model 34

A Smaller Six at a Lower Price

A car that embodies every essential of Velie quality in appearance and performance. With long, graceful body in the Velie lasting mirror finish, and upholstered in genuine leather. With sure and silent six-cylinder power. A car of marked distinction anywhere—at a lower price that will astonish you. See and judge for yourself what an unusual value this is.

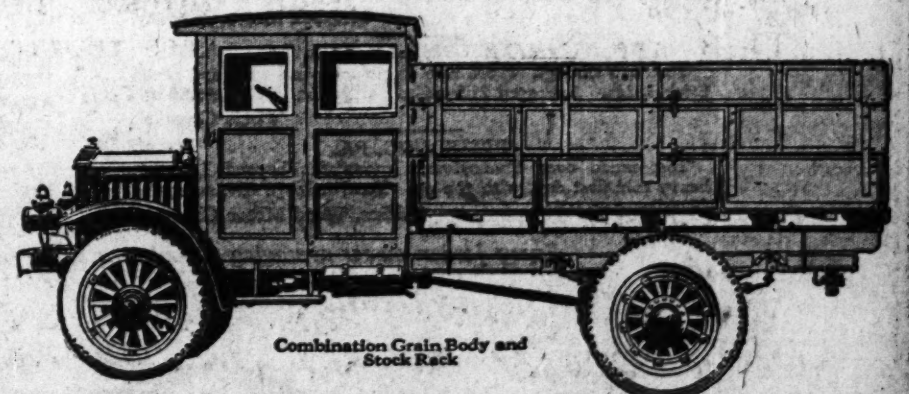

The new Velie Model 34 Touring Car—at a lower price.

Model 46

Velie Ton-and-a-Half Truck

The entire facilities of the Velie Truck are now concentrated on this one model. A truck that covers 90% of all trucking needs. With more speed—with double the service—at half the service cost of heavier models. Solid or pneumatic tires. The first truck to show what pneumatic equipment can do. Here is Velie quality in a truck of the range that is outselling all others combined.

And back of this complete line one of the largest manufacturing organizations of America with more than half a century of manufacturing experience. Whatever your need or preference in passenger or commercial car you will find it in our complete Velie line.

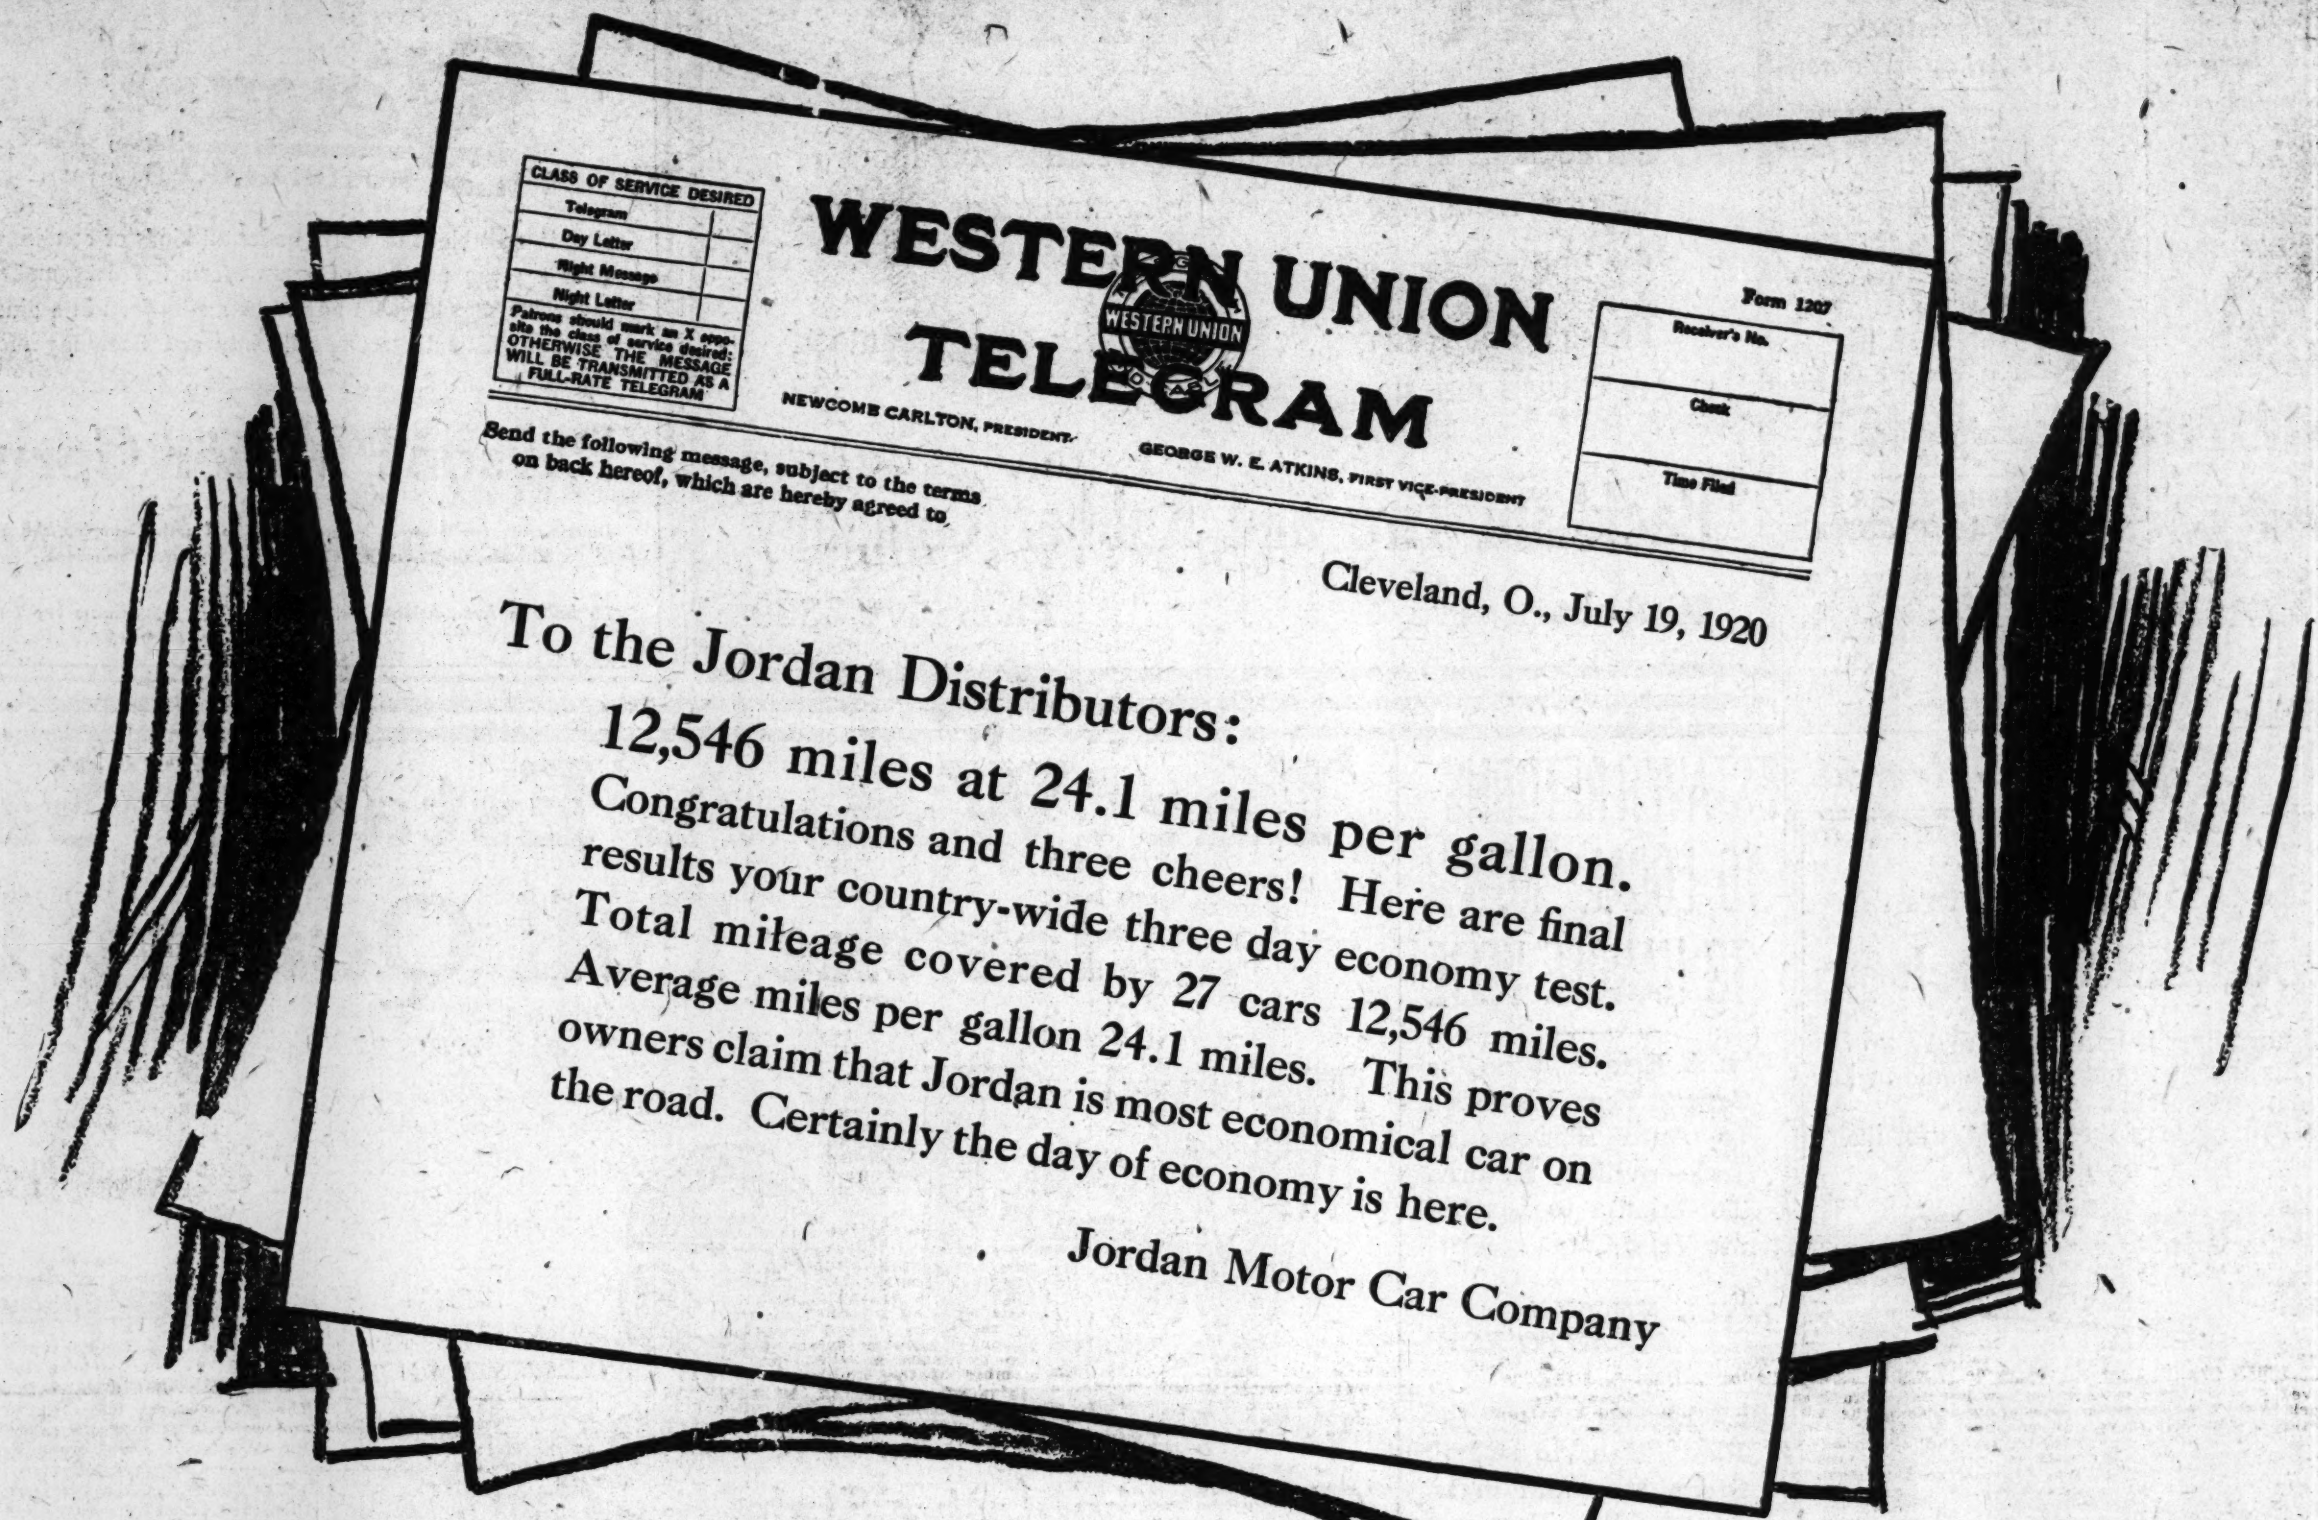

Model 46 Velie Ton-and-a-half Truck. Body types furnished for every use.

Jordan Smashes all Economy Records in Nation-wide Test—

12,546 Miles at 24.1 Miles Per Gallon

Twenty-seven stock Jordan cars in twenty-seven different sections of the United States, traveled 12,546 miles averaging 24.1 miles per gallon in a big country-wide three day economy test last week.

The run was staged by Jordan distributors under the supervision of official observers, chosen by the local newspapers.

Here is how it came about. Jordan built the lightest car on the road for its wheelbase—2800 pounds—superbly balanced—1400 pounds forward—1400 pounds astern.

Jordan owners at once began making startling claims of economy.

Jordan dealers were incredulous at first. The Jordan factory waited. The owners furnished more proof.

Then the run was organized. Note in the telegrams reproduced below the striking similarity of averages under favorable road conditions. The day of economy has dawned at last.

The hour of the light-weight, compact, high-grade, good-looking, perfectly-balanced, rattle-proof, comfortable and economical motor car is here.

Economy with distinction—describes the Jordan perfectly. That's what lifts this car with a personality so far above the mass.

REAL ESTATE—For Sale REAL ESTATE—For Sale

North Side Brick Bungalow,
$2,000 Cash and $75 Month

THIS VERY ATTRACTIVE home is one of the few that can be bought on such easy terms. As you must act quickly about moving, better attach yourself to this property before the other fellow gets there. Monday morning early is your best opportunity. "He who hesitates is lost." Price $12,500.

Another North Side Brick Bungalow—
$1,500 Cash and $70 Month.

JUST WANT to tell you a few things about this one and we go on to the next one. The owner priced it to me today at $8,750, and this is mighty reasonable. You may have it at the same price. That looks as if I make nothing, but, like the owner, I am in the traveling man's expense account. It is there but you can't see it. Monday morning before breakfast may not be too soon on this. "The early bird catches the worm."

$2,500 to $3,000 Cash and $75 Month for 2-
Story Brick, 4 Bedrooms and 2 Baths.

"IT'S AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NOBODY ANY GOOD." You have been sold out and must move. Here's a new brick house ready to encompass your entire family and a room for your mother-in-law. If she kicks out her foot on the sleeping porch this winter, it will cool her off. Furnace-heated, and all other modern conveniences. These easy terms ought to make you come hot-footed to my office before the sun drives away the mist Monday A. M. Price $14,000.

Beauty Bungalow, 4 Bedrooms—$3,000
Cash and $75 Month.

NIGHT STRAIGHT UP with both fingers crossed, this is certainly and surely one of the most conspicuous and outstanding bargains in the entire Druid Hills section. It's just truly a real home. Every convenience and absolutely well built. Furnace heat, garage, spacious lot. Now the price is $12,500. Certainly you must know this is a good purchase.

$2,500 Cash and $75 Month—6-Room Bungalow. Price $8,500.

YOU SEE, I am going back to moderate prices and easy terms. This home contains three bedrooms. Call up and we will tell you where it is and you may convince yourself as to it being a "bargainette."

North Side Stone House—6 Bedrooms and
Den. $2,500 Cash and $75 Month.

THIS IS A "Jas. A. Manget Home." Just think how many children you can put in it. Contains all modern conveniences, furnace and garage, etc. I asked the owner to make very easy terms and we would try to sell the place quick. It was done. Now you buy this and your monthly payments are less than it would rent for. You would clear at least $50 monthly. Price $16,000. It's No. 40 Kenneway Avenue, near Ponce DeLeon.

No. 47 East Twelfth Street—6-Room Cottage, $6,350—$1,500 Cash and $50 Month.

THE OWNER just reminds me that we must go on and sell this house and stop fooling around. He wants to get it off his hands. I'm going to do it this week, if you'll buy it. Where are you going to find a North Side 6-room house for this price? Go look at it with me right away.

183 Moreland Ave., Near Euclid Ave., 6
Rooms. Very easy terms.

GO AND SEE this home, talk with the owner, then come and see me about those very easy terms. It's a home that will appeal to you. Price $10,000.

No. 38 Adair Ave., 5 Bedrooms, 2 Baths.
$3,500 Cash and $75 Month.

THIS HOUSE stands on a fine lot with side drive back to the garage. There are two bedrooms and bath on first floor and 3 bedrooms and bath on second. Arrangement for two apartments just as "easy as falling off a log." Furnace heat and other conveniences. Price $12,500. See terms and see the house.

Magnificent Ponce DeLeon Avenue Home,
Corner Lot, 80x270.

THIS IS A REAL HOME and I am going to say very little but ask you to inspect it and only by appointment. It's a handsome two-story colonial. The rooms are spacious and there's a most picturesque view of the interior as you enter. Servants' house on the rear lot. All appointments are modern, up-to-date, and very substantial construction. Price $25,000, and terms can be made.

Colonial Home, 46 Peachtree Place. Lot
125x250. 5 Bedrooms, 3 Baths.

THIS IS ONE of most attractive offerings I have on the North Side. It's between the Peachtree. An offer of $20,000 was submitted this week. I wired it to New York. If declined you may have it for the price, $21,000, and terms can be made.

ODDS AND ENDS

Various kinds of investment property situated in different sections of the city. We have grouped all these places together under the common head of PROPERTY WORTH THE MONEY.

HALF OF A CITY BLOCK IN WEST END HAVING THREE STREET FRONTS—On Rosser, Greenberry and Lawton streets we have a tract of land containing approximately two acres. Both Lawton and Greenberry streets have all improvements down, and Rosser street has all except street pavement. There is a small four-room cottage on Rosser street side that could be fixed up to serve as a temporary home. The property can be divided into about fourteen building lots and sold off to a decided advantage. We are offering the entire property for $6,250, on terms of $1,000 cash and balance in sixty equal monthly notes.

177 FEET OF FRONTAGE ON HIGHLAND AVENUE—On east side of Highland avenue, between Washita and Colquitt, we offer 177 feet by an average depth of 140 feet. This property drops off, but the additional cost in improving it is more than offset by the very low price at which we are offering same; namely $20 per front foot.

TWELVE LOTS ON BOULEVARD DEKALB INSIDE THE CITY—Some people pay as much as $2,500 for a single building lot, but here we offer 12 lots for the price of $2,500; 6 of these lots face Boulevard DeKalb and six face Montgomery avenue. They are one block from South Decatur car line, in eastern portion of the city; each lot is 50x200 in size. This is certainly an opportunity for someone to acquire a large tract and sell off enough lots later on to make a home free of cost. The entire bunch for $2,500; half cash, balance in one year.

RENTING INVESTMENT, MONTHLY PAYMENTS—We offer for sale two 3-room houses, Nos. 54 and 56 Johnson street, between Mangum and Gray streets. Price $1,600 for the two. These houses are renting at $10.80 each, making a total rental income of $21.60 per month, which includes water rates. We can sell both houses for $400 cash and 60 monthly notes of $20 each, with interest at 7 per cent. You can see how the rent will go a long way toward paying for this property.

DEKALB AVENUE LOT—Near Delta Place, in Inman Park, vacant lot, fronting 125 feet on DeKalb avenue, extending back an average depth of 100 feet, situated about 75 feet west of Delta Place. We can sell this lot for $1,500; terms $500 cash, balance monthly or annual notes, with 7 per cent interest. This is a good location for garage or repair shop, as it is situated on main paved highway, having all street improvements in front. The lot is bounded on west by a 20-foot alley.

ECONOMICAL BUILDING LOT NEAR BOULEVARD—In the fire district we can sell a lot situated on south side of Rankin street, 160 feet east of Boulevard, for $750; terms $250 cash and $25 per month, with 7 per cent interest. This lot is 40x50, and has an alley on side. All street improvements down; water and sewer connection all made, water meter in. This is a good place for someone to build a cheap temporary home and escape high rents.

AN OUT-OF-TOWN OWNER writes us to sell a Kirkwood lot, adjoining No. 60 Fair street. It is 50x229, and he wants $1,250 for same.

A M'LENDON AVENUE CORNER—The southwest corner of Glendale, being 343x410, at a price of $4,500. We consider this a good buy.

My Ideal American Girl

A Study by Hamilton King, Who Finds the "After-the-War" Type of Young Woman Has Many Adorable New Traits

DECORATIONS BY DAN SMITH

THERE have been, and still are, Gibson girls, Christie girls, Stanlaws girls and various other adorable types of American girls, each representing an ideal of the particular artist whose name she bears. All of these different types were, and are, so charming that it might be difficult for the average man honestly to admit that he preferred, and still prefers, any one type of girl to the exclusion of all the others.

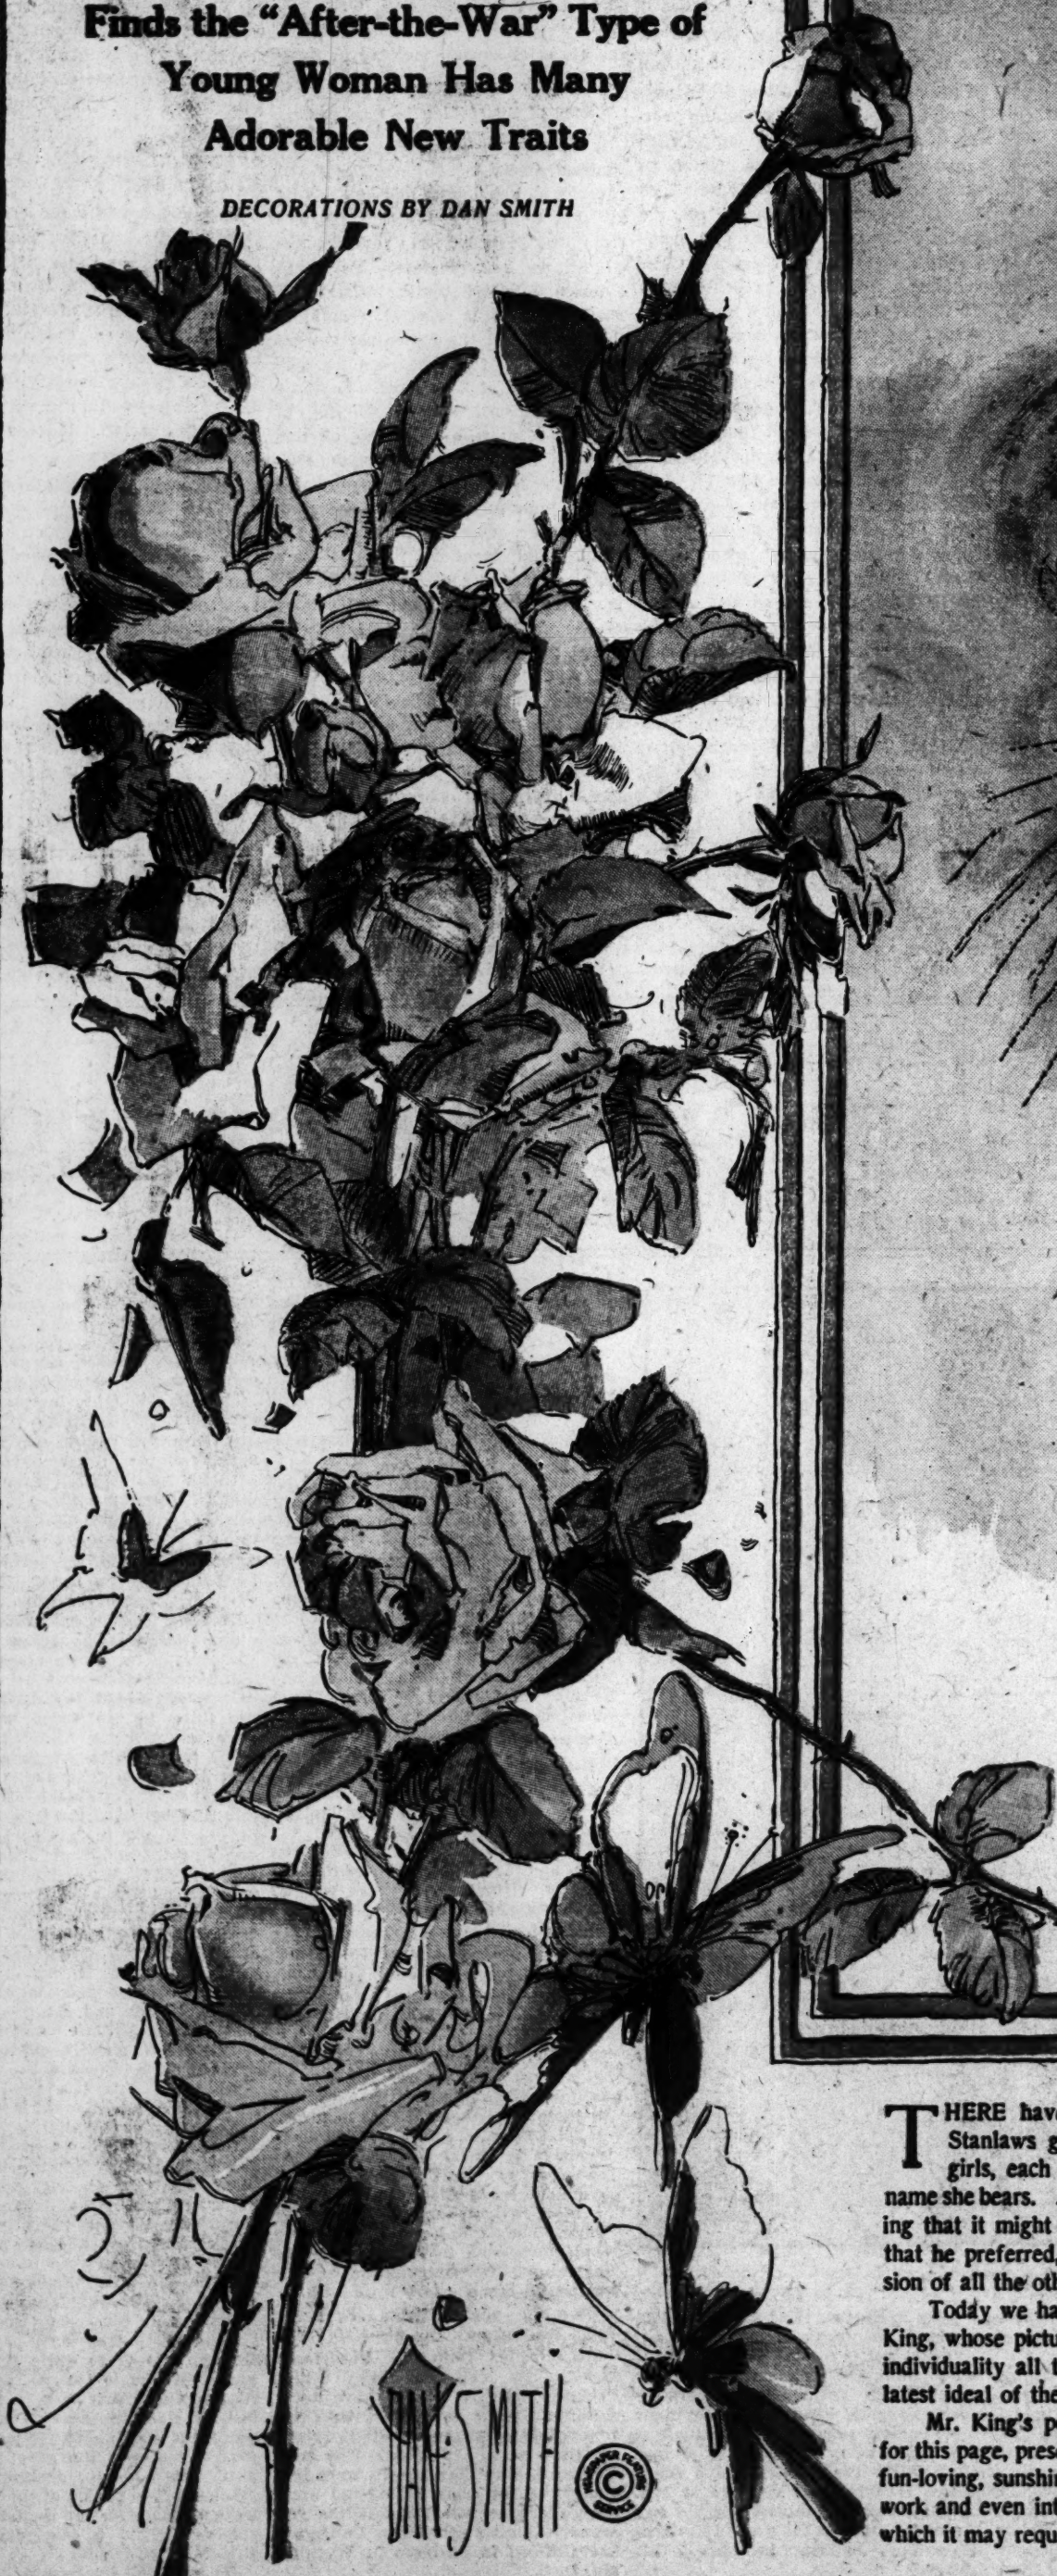

Today we have a new type, the after-the-war girl, and Hamilton King, whose pictures of famous American beauties have a recognized individuality all their own, declares that the after-the-war girl is his latest ideal of the American girl as we now see and know her.

Mr. King's portrayal of the after-the-war girl, drawn especially for this page, presents a type contrasting sharply with all the sprightly, fun-loving, sunshiny and care-free types pictured so often before war work and even intimate association with the war itself left an imprint which it may require years to eradicate.

"The American girl of today is different from the before-the-war girl," declares Mr. King. "When war came, she laid aside her butterfly wings and became the most serious, hard-working girl imaginable. She worked at home and abroad, in uniform, in nurse's garb and in the working clothes of a munitions maker. She became the 'war-girl' and there is no doubt in my mind but that her war experiences, sorrowful though they often were, have enhanced her beauty.

"Today we find her an interesting mixture of the gay and the serious. She tasted just enough of the war to give her a somewhat serious outlook on life. With this is mingled the marvelous alloy of youth, minus the care-free characteristics so often identified with adolescence.

"The result is a sweet, lovable and quite fascinating new American girl, but withal a young woman who will command the respect and admiration of the intelligent thinker wherever she goes. And she is my ideal."

Big Party of Nobles and Ladies Tour North and West In Journey to and From Shrine Meeting.

By the Official Disseminator of Sacred Bull, Aided and Abetted by Len Baldwin.

Yaarab Temple's pilgrimage to the Imperial council meeting of the mystic shrine in Portland, Oregon, was a most enjoyable trip to all who made the long journey of 8,000 miles, and Atlanta was well advertised throughout the entire way, for wherever Yaarab Temple's famous organizations go they are right up center of stage under the glare of the spotlight, because Yaarab's band, patrol and chanters are recognized everywhere as top-notchers in their particular line of activities and entertainment and therefore deservedly popular.

The train was made up of nine standard sleepers, an observation compartment car, two diners and a baggage car, and left Atlanta at 4 p. m. on June 14, the first section returning July 6 and the second section on July 12.

The first stop was made at Adairsville, Ga., where all the available vacant space was filled up with a shipment of Georgia peaches (the sort that grows on trees), which were distributed at the principal stopping places on the trip to Portland just to show the people along the way that the Georgia peach merits all the fame it has gained.

One feature of the trip was a Victrola that Noble Bame had placed in the observation car with a generous selection of records, so that from start to finish music and dancing were enjoyed by all who cared to sit and listen or trip the light fantastic.

At Chattanooga a stop of an hour was made and the band, patrol and chanters entertained the multitudes who gathered. This gave an opportunity to try Frank Cundell's tuneful little ditty, which goes something like this:

Georgia! Georgia! Everybody knows!
Georgia! Georgia! Where the watermelon grows—
Ripe and juicy on the vine!
Georgia! Georgia! You are mine!

Not so much of a song, you think? Well, maybe not. But Frank gave it a catchy, zippy sort of a melody, and then when you hear sixteen of Yaarab's famous chanters sing it, and then Yaarab's Million Dollar band play it, why, it's just like the whooping 'n' it, and join in singing on the next repetition.

ADVERTISING ATLANTA AND GEORGIA.

And that's the way it was from Chattanooga all the way round the circle back to Atlanta. Everybody sang the watermelon song; everybody knew about Yaarab, Atlanta and Georgia. Oh, you can't stop a bunch of Georgians from advertising this great state, and there must be some truth in that story about the Atlanta man who attended a funeral in a far off town; the deceased was a man beloved by all, and at the close of his remarks, the minister felt that he had not done the good man justice, and asked if anyone wished to say anything. The Atlanta man waited a minute, and as no one responded he arose and said: "While you who know the deceased are thinking up what you would like to say, I will improve the moment by telling you of the wonderful city of Atlanta."

Yaarab's caravan consisted of 225 nobles and ladies, and like all Shrine parties, it was soon one big family. At Evansville, Ind., a short stop was made and dancing became the main attraction, and it was here that Recorder Argard, who was injured in an accident a few years ago, accomplished his great ambition of being able to dance again. George is prouder of this than of his wonderful vest which is covered with Shrine emblems and is the envy and wonder of all newly-created Shriners; you see, the older ones get used to it after a while. The entire train crew out of Evansville was composed of Shriners and the engineer had his pet dolly up like a 16-year-old girl going to her first Sunday school picnic.

The train arrived in Chicago on time, and the party was entertained by Medinah Temple with luncheon in the magnificent mosque and automobile trips through the great system of parks and boulevards, leaving at 10 p. m. for St. Paul, where Osman Temple was host for the day.

"Ike and Mike—They Look Alike."

It was here that everybody began to see double, despite the fact that it was a regular Sahara of a place. If only a few had been so afflicted the double-vision mystery might have been explained easily by a secret cache in someone's suit case, but everybody was seeing double, including the Osman nobles. But it was only a case of "Ike and Mike—They Look Alike," and the Ike and Mike in this instance were Henry C. Heinz, potentate of Yaarab Temple, and Dr. B. F. Simon, potentate of Osman Temple. In addition to the splendid hospitality, the nobles of Osman Temple made things interesting for those who were looking for fun and frivolity.

For instance, Mrs. Len Baldwin coaxed Len over to a quiet corner of the mosque on pretext of a family council over something, and Len, like the good, trusting husband he is, bit. She indicated a very comfortable chair into which Len dropped resignedly, and from which he arose suddenly with a yell that brought an echo of ha! ha! from the concave Osman nobles who had wired the chair to partially electrocute trusting victims who could be lured to the place of execution.

It was shortly after this that someone, they say was Past Potentate Forrest Adair, quietly whispered to some of the boys that the Osman nobles had a room downstairs that they called Dinty Moore's place. There was something about that name of Dinty Moore that suggested unmentionable delight to the thirsty boys from arid Georgia, and soon a stream of red fez was headed for Dinty's place. Sure enough! It looked so real that they waded right in, swallowing bait, hook, line and sinker—for the wieners were rubber, the cheese sandwiches contained slices of soap, and, worse than all, the enticing-looking red stuff in the familiar bottles was plain vinegar. But Shriners may always expect a joke, and it is the good ones that make a hit. This was a good one, as many of the party will testify—if they ever get rid of the taste of that soap and vinegar.

Dixietees Near North Pole.
The next stop was at Glasier Park.

Wyoming and the party soon learned why it is called Glasier, for few of the Dixietees had calculated on getting so near the North Pole, and had neglected to take along earmuffs and overcoats, and for once the ladies with summer furs found them useful, as well as ornamental. It was here that Byron Souders, chairman of the transportation committee, was made a full-fledged Injun chief by Chief Tenderfoot Bear, being presented with a bright red blanket and a tepee made of fir, but when they began to trot up the Injun maidens for him to select a squaw, Byron dropped the blanket, shook off his headdress of turkey feathers and beat it for the train.

El Katiff Temple, at Spokane, was host during the stay in that city, the entertainment taking the form of a luncheon, automobile rides and a dance in the evening in honor of Yaarab Temple. Arriving in Seattle the next day the caravan was met by a delegation of 100 young ladies with baskets of roses, and Potentate Henry C. Heinz was presented with a bouquet of American Beauties that was as large as a tub. Henry is a good-sized lad, but when he gathered up that bouquet he was in eclipse for once in his life. In the afternoon a competitive prize drill was put on for the patrols of a number of temples which were stopping in the city, and Yaarab's Patrol won the prize, a beautiful silk American flag. This was the Yaarab's Patrol, which, under the capable direction of Captain F. E. Van der Veer, has attained the distinction of being one of the very best patrols in all Shrinemasonry, repeated its feat of being judged the best, as occurred at the Imperial council meeting in Seattle in 1914.

Best of Everything in Portland.

A delegation of nobles from Al Kader Temple, of Portland, met the caravan at Vancouver, and on arriving at the temporary Mecca, Yaarab's train was parked within three blocks of Shrine headquarters. Potentate Heinz and Past Potentate Adair were provided with a special escort to their hotel and the entire party were shown every courtesy possible during the stay of four days. Features of the Imperial council meeting of particular interest to nobles of this section were the elevation of Past Potentate Adair to a life membership in the Imperial council, the selection of Yaarab's chanters to sing at the annual banquet of the Imperial council, the greatest honor in its gift to a musical organization, and the decision of the shrine as a national body to invest two million dollars in the building, equipping and maintenance of a crippled children's hospital, modeled along the lines of that great charity instituted and maintained by the Scottish Rite bodies of Atlanta, the benefits and practical operations of which being graphically presented by Past Potentate Adair, and which had much to do with the unanimous vote that was recorded for the measure.

Four parades featured the gathering, two of them being strictly shrine affairs, the others being an electric paade at night and a floral parade in the daytime. The biggest parade required four hours and thirty minutes to pass a given point, there being 87 bands and 96 shrine patrols in line. One of the principal streets of the city was laid with railroad tracks, on which were parked 86 special shrine trains.

Leaving Portland the caravan was entertained at San Francisco by Islam Temple, at Los Angeles by Al Mahalah Temple, and at Salt Lake City by El Kajah Temple, and the pilgrims were given an opportunity of viewing the interesting points of these three localities with nobles of the order as guides, and free transportation in automobiles.

CARAVAN DIVIDES AT SALT LAKE CITY.

At Salt Lake City the caravan was split into two parties, one returning home direct, the other going to Yellowstone Park for a week's tour of that wonderful gift of nature to man. From this point they next went to Colorado City, motored to the top of Pike's Peak, viewed the other wonders of nature in that locality and then high-bailed it for Atlanta, via Kansas City and St. Louis.

At Colorado City Bayne Gibson got into the limelight with a series of pretty speeches, for which he is noted, in presenting Byron Souders a diamond-studded Scottish Rite emblem as a token of appreciation of the members of the caravan for the hard work he had done as supervisor and general manager of transportation, and beautiful diamond Shrine pins to those who assisted him—Joe Woodall, special representative of the Pullman company, and Jim Waddell, the Pullman conductor.

The trip cost over $100,000, and the caravan was the largest that went out of Dixie to this year's Imperial council meeting. It is a tribute to Potentate Heinz that it was one of the most successful and pleasant pilgrimages ever made by Yaarab Temple.

Bootleggers, Beware! Pussyfoot Is Coming

BY PAUL WARWICK.

There'll be a bunch of people there with bootleggers' addresses and telephone numbers in their pockets, and there may be a few present with variously merited and discounted odor of second-run lightning clinging to them—but they will be there with admiration to offer, even if their opinions diverge exceedingly from his—"Pussyfoot" Johnson's.

He's coming to Atlanta, you know, on Thursday, July 29, and that night he will deliver his famous preachment of aridity—"What I Can See Through My Glass Eye." This champion of universal bone-dryness who startled all of England and peevish most of it with his manifestations against the royal and traditional beer and ale, but who won the applause, even of tavern keepers and red-nosed tipplers with his exhibition of good sportsmanship when a scuffle with students cost him an eye, has included Atlanta in his continental itinerary.

There's not a more interesting personality in the states today than Pussyfoot. While he was pursuing his campaign in England there wasn't a more interesting personality in the British Isles. When he makes more of his crusades in other lands, as he has promised himself and his army of followers, the same interest will follow him there.

The world has had its turn with Pussyfoot. He came nearer than any person or quantity of establishing an eighth original joke for jesters and jokers the world over to harp upon in every available and understandable tongue—including the Scandinavian. Despite the jeers and jibes, the world looks up to him. And by the way, just about one-half of one per cent of those who have heard him know that he was christened William Eugene. Rather useless now, but dignified as a signature.

"AMAZING GUTS" IN PUSSYFOOT.

Mr. Johnson is a man with enough individuality to be considered aside from the cause which he so militantly espouses. There is undoubtedly in him enough of that quality labeled by Con Dawson "amazing guts" to put him to the forefront as a fighter. The manner in which he lost his eye in England, or better, the way in which he accepted the loss, is a tribute to the man in itself.

In a rather bustling sort of a scrap in London, during his delirious pilgrimage to that metropolis, Pussy-foot was struck in the eye by a sizeable British cobblestone, thrown by one of the group of students who were engaged in hazing the exponent of prohibition as a protest against any kind of interference with their diurnal elbow-bending and ale-sipping. Not a howl has yet been heard from Johnson, although the content of that brick with his eye cost him its sight. He bought a glass eye, and proceeded to capitalize it in his fight against ubiquitous thirst.

He laughed about the incident at the time in about the same rollicking fashion as would have been employed by a freckled school boy at having a shirt sleeve ripped in a playground tussle. The next day England proceeded to lionize him, and still chooses to look to him as a hero, although it is not recorded that the majority of Englishmen are yet ready to abandon their pale ale and stout in deference to the sportsmanship of Pussyfoot.

The tale doesn't end there. After the great exhibition of nerve by Johnson, wherein his utter lack of manifestation of resentment probably averted a long and detailed interchange of diplomatic billets-doux between Washington and London, the press, pulpit and public voice of the British Isles began to shower tribute on the American who had so gamely given an eye for an idea and kept hushed about it.

One source, by popular subscription, raised a sizeable purse for Pussyfoot, and presented it to him with due formality and sincerity—a means of expressing in material fashion the laudable opinion held of him by hundreds of Englishmen. No sooner had he received the donation than he gave it to an English hospital for the blind, with a comment like this:

"I've got one eye, they have none. Let them have the money."

ENGLAND TO BE DRY BY 1930, HE SAYS.

The great dry champion prophesies, however, that England will be dry by 1930, and substantiates his claim to that exceptional possibility by quoting Premier Lloyd George in corroboration of his own belief. His characteristic optimism carries him a step further, too, to the extent that he believes world-prohibition is not only in sight, but coming this way. He avows that one-third of the nations of Europe are nearer prohibition today than was the United States ten years ago.

In addition to the personality which Pussyfoot has injected into the national and international aspect of his work against the Demon Rum and its alcoholic associates, reports of Mr. Johnson indicate that his individuality is of a surprising and delightful nature. The little incidents related about his private life and conversation are fully as interesting and attractive to the human in men as are the exploits which have endowed him with a more or less cosmopolitan ego.

For instance, there is nothing calumnious or even jocular in the appellation by which he is known—which has become a by-word among the dries and a cuss-word among the wets. The name hove up to Mr. Johnson and stayed put years ago when he was in the federal service. The monicker, so indicative of smoothness, was appended to his personality on account of his uncanny ability to pursue his task of suppressing the liquor traffic among the Indians without his presence being altogether noticeable until it was too late, and a consignment of red-eye had lost its hilarious utility.

Let Mr. Johnson tell the story in his own words. His style will give you an insight into his dynamic personality, as well as present an angle on his doings out west in the day before you heard so much of him.

HOW HE WON HIS NICKNAME.

"One day a man walked into my office in Muskogee," he says, "with a message from a Haskell saloon keeper intimating in a friendly way that if I dared show my face in Haskell he would shoot me. Of course, I could not refuse such an invitation. I sent a scout into Haskell and found that the saloon keeper had never seen me, but had a good description of me. So one night I disguised myself and rode into Haskell. I tethered my horse to his geranda and walking into the bar called for a drink."

"My fiercest friend was a big man, but the thing that interested me most was a .45 at his hip."

"He offered me a bottle, which I at once said was too weak and smashed on the bar. 'Give me hell-fire,' I cried. He opened a secret trap in the floor and handed me a bottle of whiskey."

"My one object was to get him to show me his back, and I maneuvered him until I was able to whip out his revolver, hold it to his ear and introduce myself. The next day the local paper told the story and called me 'Pussyfoot.' That was how I earned my name."

Not because it is the only thing he ever did, but because it has been the most widely recognized, the so-called Mr. Johnson in British territory, so close to the hanger of Scotch and the kick of Irish, is splendidly typical of the man himself. A good idea of the effect his unassuming presence had on the London public and it is only half-just to say that "Pussyfoot" Johnson has taken his dispatch to the New York Globe from place."

Whatever condemnatory effect this effort may accrue in a half-interlarded way, it means and signifies recognition. Such evidence of universal notice, coupled with the fact that Mrs. David Lloyd George, wife of the British premier, aided Johnson in promotion of the drive for dryness in "reached Scotland, seals the surety of its repulse."

Though he has bunched all his energies in an effort to make the world safe from intoxicants, and has battled the bourbon phalanx consistently for years, Pussyfoot doesn't pose as a tin god, or a being endowed with saintly purity. He knows and smokes a good cigar when he sees and wants one, and is not the least bit encouraging to those who affirm that the swirling clouds of tobacco smoke are he next delights to be wrung from American intemperance.

NOT FIGHTING AGAINST TOBACCO.

With reference to that possibility, he has been quoted as saying, "A campaign against tobacco? Why, no, never heard of any one smoking too much and then going home to beat his wife. However, if there was an anti-nicotine amendment, I wouldn't weak the law just for the sake of a cigar. I'd get out and go to another country first. If I couldn't find a nation whose laws I wanted to obey, I'd go to hell, where they haven't any laws."

Maybe he is narrow-minded, there is just as many to say you may as eat, for he has admitted that he likes the taste of liquor. Which is a conclusion, after all. Another of his many necessities is to the effect that when a student at the University of Nebraska, he led a deputation to the state in a revival service to sign the pledge. The sight, he said, so inspired spiritually soul in the congregation that she set the congregation to singing the old hymn whose words ran:

"See the mighty hosts advancing, Satan leading on!"

Westerville, Ohio, is Pussyfoot's home. His wife was Miss Lillian Trevitt, and the couple have three children. Their daughter, Miss Clara Johnson, is a student in St. Mary's of the Springs, in Columbus. The sons, Clifford L. and Clarence T., were lieutenants of the army during the world war; Clarence now being in the government Indian service in California, and Clifford in business in Washington, D. C.

Newspapers and publicity have long been intimate connections with his life. For years he was editor of the New York Voice, a prohibition organ, and he went abroad for several years as representative of the Funk and Wagnalls Company, in quest of data and articles. His travels have carried him into practically every civilized country on the top side of earth, which probably accounts for some of his expressed intentions.

He says he will invade India, and there will endeavor to evaporate whatever staggering beverages may be found flowing about Kipling's favorite ballad setting. Cuba, too, comes within his prospective area of immediate aridity, which brings regret to the souls of tourist agencies and aeroplane manufacturers.

It seems about the most appropriate thing in the world that one of Pussyfoot's little trots about the globe took him to the Sahara desert. And it is not intended as a slam against his total abstinence to chronicle that he made the trip on doctor's orders. It was there that Johnson annexed quite a bit of inspiration on this dry business. He liked it immensely, as it was positively the driest place he had ever seen and his activities since have indicated that he thought it was practically a model piece of terrain. He put in some prohibition work, even, in that super-dried-out land, and returned with the news that a Moslem who becomes intoxicated is socially ostracized and nicknamed a Christian.

Although Atlanta's present liquid condition won't give Pussyfoot much opportunity for exhibiting his Carrie Nation proclivities—he used to smash the barrooms and liquor joints with a sledge hammer—the city will be interested in him. He has jaunted all over the North American continent since his return from abroad, and everywhere he's been, they have met him with headlines and big audiences. The city of Twin Falls, Idaho, was so anxious to hear him relate the perspective he was getting on a dry America through his glass optic that it prevailed on him to swerve from his itinerary and visit them. In order to do it it was necessary to dispatch an aeroplane to Granger, Wyoming, and from there keep Pussyfoot in the air until his Idaho destination was reached. The people of the Idaho city were so eager for the recital that they raised $600 in a few minutes, and paid his airplane fare.

He will visit us July 29.

The MAN in the SILKEN MASK

Strange Jimmy Harrigan—Was He Supercriminal or Rank Amateur?—Shot to Death by Chicago Police,
This Notorious Robber
Leaves Notebook of His List of Crimes—Stocked a Garage With Loot.

By EDWARD H. SMITH

SOME weeks since, in Chicago, the police filled the body of a desperate man with twenty bullets. He had been arrested and taken to a station house, mainly to tell who he was and why he was prowling about the North Shore residential district late in a moonless night. When the police attempted to search this man he uncovered an automatic pistol, shot down two officers and tried to escape. He was driven into an impasse and shot to death with the fire of a dozen police revolvers. When this rash fellow had expired the police produced a black silken mask which they had found in a pocket of the dead man's coat. This, said they, was Jimmy Harrigan, the notorious Silk Mask Burglar.

Immediately a romantic herbage sprang up about this man and his veiled life. Like that strange rank grass which greens in an hour after a sudden hot rain in a desert and is dead within the sunspan. It was said that Jimmy Harrigan was the peer of burglars, the leader of a great and subtle criminal gang, a looter of millions, perhaps; a felonious superman. All this was false—mere reprobatorial yarning. Yet the Silk Mask Burglar proved to be an extraordinary criminal, a personal mystery. The story:

For six months the Chicago police had been struggling with an elusive housebreaker who had confined his attentions mainly to the prosperous apartment house district of Chicago's outlying North Side. Apparently it has become fashionable to refer to this part of the Chicago world as the Gold Coast—a most amiable and windy euphuism, I assure you. However, many persons of money and many more who make comfortable livings reside in this section. Not much coast and very little golden, but nevertheless quite attractive from the burglarious standpoint.

It was said in Chicago that scores of apartments in this district had been turned off by a robber whose methods and marks were characteristic and repetitive. One man or one gang was blamed. Later on, a robber was vaguely seen on several such occasions. It was said he wore always a black silken mask concealing the upper part of his face. No one got within shooting or catching distance of the man or was prepared to shoot or capture so redoubtable fellow. He was seen in the act of vanishing. So the tradition of the Silk Mask Burglar grew and expanded.

Chicago has been suffering, with many other places, from a revival of the criminal habit. Murders, hold-ups, safe robberies and burglaries have multiplied in the western metropolis as almost nowhere else. For about two years, according to various sources of information, this increased criminality has been a problem. The police have been only moderately successful.

But the activities of the Silk Mask Burglar started loud protesting and spurred to larger activity. The North Shore district was flooded with officers in plain clothes. Still the burglarizing went on.

But on the fatal night an officer marked a man slipping out of a darkness between two flat houses. He approached the fellow and asked what might be the explanation. The stranger was jocular. He was on a legitimate errand. The policeman didn't arrest him on the spot, but resolved to hold him in eye. In the darkness the man vanished again. The officer began to search. He was about to give up when he saw the stranger again, skulking still about night darkened houses. This time the officer pounced on the man and demanded explanations. And they were forthcoming.

It was no nervous hand that poised the revolver in readiness.

Smiling broadly, the mysterious man explained that he was trying to locate the home of a sweetheart. He had a clandestine appointment with her and was not certain of the number of her house. The officer understood how such things were. He was a policeman, and such complications were not new to him. Besides, said the stranger, here was his badge as a special officer. Surely the policeman would not betray him and cause him to be suspended for deserting his post to go courting. So saying, the stranger also produced a card identifying him as an employee of a private detective concern.

Nevertheless the policeman insisted on taking his capture to the Town Hall station house to "tell it to the sergeant." The man went without protest. He repeated his story with all good humor in the station and every one believed him. They were about to send him on his way when the arresting officer decided to make sure.

"I think I'll frik this bird before I go," said the policeman. He started toward the prisoner, who was idly smoking.

The man moved lazily to knock the ash from his cigarette. With the upward movement of his arm he brought out an automatic and began to fire. He backed up and out the door as he emptied his weapon, gained the street and started to run. But too many police were upon him. He managed to bring two men down with wounds. Other officers appeared from the station and the streets. Revolvers popped at the fugitive from every side. He was driven into a blind alley beside the police house and there he went down with a handful of pistol balls in his bleeding body. They carted him quickly to a hospital, where he died within a few minutes. A sensational end.

Now the strangeness and wonder of the man began to be uncovered. First of all, it was found that James Harrigan was, indeed, a private detective of the common sort. He had worked as special policeman and watchman for detective firms in both Chicago and New York.

Again, it was found that James Harrigan had been living respectably in the house of a widow, who accepted him as a man of substance and probity and was permitting his attentions and returning them with interest. The woman; the sentimental filip.

But the genuine astonishments were all hidden away in an old garage at 2214 North Clark Street, half a mile from the police station where Jimmy Harrigan fought his lethal combat. This place the Silk Mask Burglar had rented and converted into a storehouse for his loot. The place consisted of a street level floor and a basement, the building running through from Clark to Sedgwick Streets and having exits on both. In this place this strange criminal had hidden away, apparently without attempt to sell any considerable part, the proceeds of scores, perhaps hundreds, of housebreakings. The place was clogged with the strangest assortment of loot one might hope to stare upon. Everything from gold and silver ornaments to a great collection of valueless bone collar buttons was in the place. Oriental rugs, fine draperies, ornamental lamps, silverware, clocks, furniture, vases, table pieces, Chinoleries, books, pictures, clothing, travelling bags, jewelry, watches, bath towels, linens, hats, gloves, soap, ashtrays, penholders, cameras, lodge charms or insignia, electric sadirons, glasses, odd coins, keys, bottles of liquor, furs, fur coats, violins, banjos, guitars, purses, meshbags, revolvers, rifles, fishing tackle, electric vibrators, razors, combs and brushes, surgical instruments, automobile tires and parts, shoes, smoking sets—everything, no matter how useless and valueless, that could be carried out of a score of apartments. Even kitchen utensils and toys costing a few cents were to be discovered in the mountainous store of this strange criminal.

Investigation about the place disclosed more marvel. In the cellar was a dugout with a steel roof, through which the robber had cut a gunhole, apparently intending to make his last stand in this armored retreat and shoot down his pursuers at his ease. At another point was a trap door through which the criminal might descend quickly to his bombproof. Again there was an alarm on the street door which sounded a buzzer in the cellar to warn the hoarding robber against any intrusion.

The investigations continued to develop unusual facts. It was found that Jimmy Harrigan was able to pass himself off as a man of culture and wide travel. He spoke seven languages or dialects. He had something of an air. The truth seems to be that he was the son of an Irish-American father and a mother of German extraction. On the early death of his father, the mother had taken her son back to Germany and he had there acquired his linguistic breadth.

Among the piles of loot in the storehouse of the Silk Mask Burglar were found several small leather account or memorandum books. On investigation these were found to contain a strange order of data. They were the account books, ledgers, orderly records of a man in the burglary business. In one book was found noted down a complete list of all the apartments robbed by the burglar. A sample will show what the record was like:

"G. Watson, 850 Windsor, Trip No. 24—Vibrator, chain and charm, flashlight, tire gauge, pair cuff buttons, set stickpins, kodak, A. P. L. badge, fiddle, brown bag, set silverware."

Two other books were not less unusual. In one the man of the silken mask kept a file of all places still to be robbed. It was the familiar—to those who know criminals—prospect list. Here were set down the names and addresses of persons whose houses were considered worth robbing, with notes on the habits of the owner and his family, on the manner of ingress, on the hour best suited for attack and on the financial standing of the prospective victim.

A third book contained a list of automobile owners with the date, make, condition and probable value of their cars. Evidently the burglar was about to devote his attention to the more fruitful field of automobile stealing.

JIMMY HARRIGAN.

With all this information the police began to piece out the story of this man and to tag him with explanatory names. The theories regarding him are numerous and mostly amusing. First it was held that he must be the head of a burglar's syndicate. A pretty stale sort of idea and one that found no corroboration. Again, Harrigan was said to have operated with the aid of a number of women, none of whom has been shown to the sunlight. Once more, an aged man in dark glasses was put forward as the accomplice of Harrigan.

I think it is possible to explain the Silk Mask Burglar much more simply and satisfactorily. First of all, Harrigan was a mental defective and possibly insane. His actions on the night of his arrest and death are those of a quixotic deficient or a paranoic in the incipient stages of his disease. Such men—of either class—may be shrewd, cunning, efficient, and yet unbalanced or mad.

Let us say, since there is no clinical information on which to make a choice, that this man was mentally off in one of these two directions. Observe, now, that he was professionally a special officer and night watchman. His mental orbit rolled around the idea of burglary and night crimes. His life contacted him with crime. If he became unbalanced in any way his natural tendency would be to commit the crime he was habituated to think about and guard against.

Very well. Harrigan, either through observations made as a night watchman or through investigations made later by himself or a confederate, knows where there are profitable flats to rob and how to rob them. He commits his burglaries and carries off all sorts of nondescript loot which no sane robber would touch. Mere inexperience could not extend so far as to lead a man to steal cakes of soap and old shoes and hairpins and collar buttons.

But Harrigan is not a professional criminal. He has no connections in the underworld. He has no fence behind him and no channels for the disposition of his loot, most of which is not marketable in any case. He must have a place to store his goods. He rents a storehouse and fortifies it like a man who has learned his crime from the romances. Here his plunder piles up on him. He is able to pawn the best of his stuff or some of it. He can use such money as he picks up here and there. The rest must be stocked away.

But again: Harrigan was by no means the originator of the record system for criminal data. I have already said that it has always or for long been in use with many classes of robbers. However, it was Harrigan's fellow Chicagoan, the very celebrated Eddie Fay, one of the top rank bank and safe robbers, of the generation, who carried this system to perfection, who actually planned a national crime trust and tried repeatedly to build up a syndicate of bank and safe burglars. When Fay was assassinated a year or so ago this phase of his criminal genius was much written about. Harrigan undoubtedly got the whole notion from Fay and carried out the accounts system in plain English instead of code.

In other words, we have here an amateur criminal and an aberrant rolled into one. He has learned his trade from his inferior detective experience, the romantic crime tales and the ideas of genuine criminals.

Harrigan did not know how to steal or what to steal. He did not know how to dispose of his stealings or how to make connections with those who manage these little coups of business. He could not think, for his mind was diseased. He did not know how to be a criminal. But he knew how to shoot, to kill, to die. And he shot and died like the madman he was.

AS TOLD TO THE AUTHOR

I spent the remainder of that night in jail, ruminating at leisure over my folly. And in a cell adjoining mine was the red-headed fellow who had started the rumpus. Towards morning, unable to sleep myself, I cajoled my neighbor into conversation. And, before dawn, being now like myself, quite sobered of his jag, I had about convinced him that I was not the man who had relieved him of his wad. This conviction took on more concrete form in his revised opinion of me when at about breakfast time my detective friend showed up and announced that the red-headed chap's money had been picked up in the washroom of one of the hotels. It was a most lucky incident for me, too, for it strengthened my case considerably with the judge, and I got out on bail, which was afterwards canceled by the court. The red-headed chap was also released—a not unusual procedure of justice in those days; and there the affair ended as far as the shooting itself was concerned as an issue between me and the chief of police. But having been prevailed upon by certain members of the local clergy to put the screws on "gun-toters," the chief of police saw an opportunity of making a public example of me. Having deprived me of my gun, he next read the riot act and warned me that if I was ever again caught carrying a gun I would not get off so easy. I agreed to the terms of the probation, though incensed with the humiliation that I had been chosen as a sort of political goat. It was rather unfair that he should pick me out of several hundred others more prominent in the public eye.

For several months I went unarmed; then new trouble arose, and I bought another gun. Who it was informed the chief of police I never knew, else I might have gotten my revenge. The first thing I knew was that the chief was out after me, and it was my faithful detective friend who put me on guard. He it was who one morning early called me up by telephone at my hotel to notify me that he had out a warrant for my arrest and that he was coming over to get me. I took the hint, hastily packed my belongings in a suit case and crossed over the river into Juarez, there to turn the situation over in my mind at greater leisure. And the result of my meditations was that I decided it would be best to take up a temporary habitat in Mexico until the wrath of the chief of police should subside, knowing too well that he would not make any attempt to extradite me on the charge docketed against me. Besides, the carrying of guns was a common offense in those days, and I was persuaded to look upon the chief's sudden persecution of me as the passing expression of a fit of spleen. Those church people and local shouting moralists, with their pestering petitions, had no doubt gotten him slightly peeved and hot under the collar, and for political reasons it was quite expedient he should assume some of the unfeeling piety of the city reformer.

But the more I brooded over the matter and the more I cogitated over my wrongs, the madder I got; and I freely aired my opinions and grievances when drink got the better of my soberer judgments. Why didn't he arrest so-and-so who toted a gun? And why was he making political bait of me? And, as I have said, the more I ruminated on the injustice of it all, the more inflamed became my youthful and egotistical imaginations.

I finally decided that the chief was probably afraid of me because he knew me to be a "bad man." There was no other logical answer to be gotten at. And the upshot of my foolhardiness was I penned a very sarcastic letter to him, dispatching it by special messenger across the line. I conveyed the information to him that I thought he was afraid of me, and furthermore I intended to have it out with him at first sight.

CHAPTER V.

Now to more clearly picture the whole affair in its most ludicrous light, and having no desire to conceal my own idiosyncrasy, it is only fair to say that the chief of police, so it happened, was a fine, upstanding six-foot specimen of vigorous manhood. And he had a gun record stretching behind him as long and luminous as the tail of a comet. In short, he had been one of the most intrepid gun-fighters the border had ever known.

—eagle-eyed, beak-nosed and as fearless as a lion.

And having duly received my letter, and no doubt perusing same with mixed emotions, like a father he decided to come over and have a talk with me in private. He caught me unawares, disarmed me with one swift wrench of his powerful arms, forced me back into a seat and proceeded to lecture me in a gentle, childlike voice that for tone rivaled the sweetness of David's harp. And I took the tongue-dribbling as meekly as a lamb. He told me I was but a boy in years; and that I then stood at the fork of two roads, one leading toward a decent, honorable life and the other going hellward. He advised me to reform and make a man of myself; to cut out gambling and drink; that he would help me get a position in El Paso, if I cared to enlist his services. And being a Tennesseean and a southerner himself, he for that reason had a banking after my welfare, he said. He went on to add: "You come from good stock; it's plain in your face, and I believe there's the making of a man in you!"

Looking into his mild eyes and hearing the soft purr of his southern drawl, it was astonishing to think that this man could have been the husky fighter that the border country knew him to be. He had killed men and at one time he had been counted as an outlaw himself—but there was a difference. He had been the kind of bad man who, at one time, and not so long ago, this great, untamed and lawless west of ours needed. And I saw the difference; and it was the difference between black and white. Then he showed me wherein my own sprouting career promised signs of turning out black instead of white; and I had better pull up short while yet the opportunity was mine. He wound up by saying:

"Come on back to El Paso, and I'll give you another start—but I won't stand for the blackleg business. I ain't a saint myself; but I'm going to put a Sunday shine on that town. And it don't require a burning bush to show me where to light in it. Gambling houses and crooks are going by the jattle chute. They ain't a healthy increment to have around when the compass of progress is pointed in another direction."

"Sure!" I returned. "And when I'm over there, you'll call me—that's what I've been told."

At that the mildness of his gaze turned to glinting points of hard steel. "I thought you had it in you to know a man when you heard one talk—you little whelp! I gave you a man's chance, and you gambled it off. All right!" Wheeling, he strode out of the place; but before going he handed my belt and pistol to the Mexican bartender, saying: "When he's sober, give this truck back to him—and tell him to keep out of my way!"

And keep out of his way I did. Down in an ill-lighted basement of a white stucco building across the way from the Bull Ring, was a marlhauna joint. They tell me it is not there any more—it has been wiped away by an ancient landmark by the shot and shell of recent revolutions. And it was to that place I repaired, after my bout with the chief of police, to smoke a little of that deadly drug in the hopes that it would smooth out my ruffled nerves. In my dissipation, I had now about reached the top of the hill and could look on the down grade beyond. That exile of mine in Juarez had proved to be the most unfortunate experience in my whole life perhaps—it was one continuous tobogganing into depths of debauchery. It was a filthy, unsanitary hole besides, was that little Mexican border town of Juarez—the haunt and home of exiles like myself and the 'can't come backs' who remained on the Mexican side of the river because of crimes committed on the other.

And luck at cards had been against me from the first—and there was a reason. Getting jingled on mescal and doped up on marlhauna was entirely a different proposition to getting drunk on white man's whiskey. Mescal, taken in drops, and alone, is enough to undermine the hardest constitution the Almighty ever endowed a man with. And the two, along with an occasional whiff of marlhauna, got its swift work in on me. I came as near going completely under there in Juarez as at any other time or period of my career on the Open Road.

Besides undermining my health, the Mexican's hellish concoctions make a fighting, disagreeable beast of a man; and they are a lot different to plain, respectable—respectable in comparison!—whiskey drunks and Scotch-and-soda tipplers. For tequila and mescal, especially the latter, have an insidious way of more directly effecting the imagination and put a devil in the clouded mind. They steal a man's reasoning powers; and apt as not he becomes a roving, staggering maniac, seeking what and whoever he may devour. For the first time there in Juarez, I felt myself tottering at the brink of things; my nerves got unstrung and I began to see things and get a touch of the "jimmies." A short but severe spell of sickness was probably the only thing that saved me from toppling over the brink entirely.

When I regained consciousness—I have no recollection of the first stages of my illness—my system weakened but comparatively free of the poisons which had stricken me, I found myself the inmate of a local sanitarium, conducted by an American physician, who had taken more than a casual interest in my recovery. And at my bedside sat my former detective friend, the one who had thoughtfully advanced me the information that he held a warrant for my arrest.

And it was at this detective friend's advice that I decided to quit the border and go into Arizona—to a ranch owned by a friend of his, there to recuperate. Punching cattle and riding a horse, he said, would put me on my feet again—and, besides, you'll run against better company," he added. "Cowboys are a fairly decent lot, and only babies in their wickedness."

This detective friend lent me twenty-five dollars, and a few days later I left—with some glittering intention of following out his suggestions, but with no idea at all of contributing an appreciable portion of my grub-stake of twenty-five to the coffers of a railroad. I meant to "beat" my way by freight, ship my good clothes ahead of me, and save my cash for other more pressing emergencies of the road. For there was no telling how long my bad luck at cards might continue—if I played straight. So, taking everything into consideration, paying over hard cash to a railroad for transportation was the rankest kind of extravagance, a crime no real adventurer of the Open Road is guilty of committing so long as he is clothed in his right mind. Besides, it had been so long since I had ridden the "cushions" that I chose a thorough freight as a matter of preference.

So, making a cautious detour of El Paso, and keeping well to the outskirts and with an eye ever peeled for the bulls and the chief of police, I tramped it on foot past the smelters about three miles west of town and there waited on a steep up-grade for the next freight.

When I heard the labored puffing of the two locomotives beyond a sharp bend of the track in a steep cut, I crawled out from my hiding place under a protecting clump of mesquite bushes above the tracks, and slid down the dusty embankment and to my surprise alighted on the shoulders of a brother-of-the-road just in the act of squaring himself for a swing of his arms to the climbing rods of an approaching oil tank car.

I suppose he thought I was a "bull," or an unidentified enemy of some kind, for he instantly wheeled around and now squared himself for battle. And hollow-eyed he was, hollow-cheeked, but as game as a panther! Those burning, feverish eyes of his resembled a pair of French jalousies, which opened and shut stiffly as if on a hinge; his mouth also conveyed the impression of two slatted shutters that worked automatically. I have seen some queer freaks in my time, but this one took the prize for sheer originality of physical awnness of construction. He was extremely tall and extremely thin, and he seemed to have been put together in the sectional joint plan of an animated bamboo pole. His eyelids were white, and his eyes were of a whitish pink, and his two upper front teeth were missing.

But though his first greeting of my rather sudden intrusion upon his company was one of wolf-like defiance and fight, after a second glance at me a slow grin wreathed his coal dust-smear'd features, and he threw me the high sign of friendly overture.

"Say, bo," he ejaculated between spasmodic coughs, "I thought you was a shack or somethin' worse! Are youse for hoppin' this rattler com-in'?"

I said that I was, and that I had Phoenix in mind as a destination. "Well—cricky! ain't this luck! What yuh say we join forces? I'm lonesome for a geek to chew the rag wit—and besides, them shacks on this road is some fierce to deal wit, if yuh can't flash a union card on rado, where it had meant the dark

'em. They ain't Christians on this line, bo. Got any tin about you?" I grinned back and said, "No," at the same time keeping a calculating eye on the long string of cars creaking past.

"Well, if you had any tin, I was going to say keep it in your jeans, kid—keep it in your jeans. Don't let any of them blood-sucking shacks bleed you for a lift—not so much as a Mexican bean, sabs? They're grafters on this line; and they got a habit of dumpin' yuh when yuh is busted like the jabbo in the lookout cleans his firebox—on the run, sabs? I see that grease tank comin', and we'd better climb her and keep covered for a spell, for them shacks'll be fannin' the bot sides of this rattler all the way up the grade. What yuh say—ready?"

"Sure—let's get on."

We succeeded in swinging the oil car as it went by, then from that we climbed into a "slider" back of it loaded with lumber. We hid under the lumber; and after we were comfortable I made a more careful audit of my new companion of the road. Aside from being the tallest and skinniest mortal and the freakiest freak I had ever seen, he disclosed other even more astonishing traits of character purely as unquestionable proof of his versatility as a living optical illusion. And the more I looked at him, studied him from various angles, the more unreal he became to my mortal conceptions of what a human being by rights ought to be. As an instance, he used the gaping aperture, where his two front teeth should have been, as a unique device for passing out low-mumbled conversation without having to resort to the bothersome necessity of moving his lips. There was something uncanny about him—a sort of mummified Chinese puzzle in physiognomy; and physiologically he was even more an enigma to the normally constructed person with normal characteristics. And the way he impregnated the surrounding atmosphere with language through that gaping hole where his two front teeth should have been was positively a defiance of all the regulated acoustical laws of nature. He also had a way of sitting on his feet, cross-legged, his long arms folded across his flat chest, like a pair of plucked goose wings—a sort of jack-in-the-box invention he was! And I learned afterwards that he had picked up that little trick of talking through the hole in his teeth when an inmate of the state prison in Colorado, where it had meant the dark cell to be caught by a guard conversing with a fellow prisoner.

He has been sent up for stealing the same horse twice, he said, though the second offense was quite unintentional. He had simply made a terrible mistake in the dark by stealing the same horse over again—but have we not all, from the smallest to the greatest, made fatal blunders in our lives? Did not even the great Napoleon—and Caesar, and plenty of others as mighty, or almost as mighty, attribute their final fall to a single little faux pas of bad judgment?

Missouri was his birthplace, down somewhere in the southern part of the state in the mountainous district. And any terrestrial spot was his destination—except Colorado.

We were not disturbed a single time by prying shacks until we pulled in Tucson for water and a change of crews. At Tucson another hobo essayed to invade our private car by swinging up between the bumpers as we were pulling out of the town. And through ignorance of its presence or by some accident, he put a bungling foot on an airbrake pin, and with a whizz and a sputter the whole train came to a dead stop. That galoot had played the devil, and he certainly must have been a green one, too.

About a half dozen brakemen suddenly appeared from nowhere, and all advancing rapidly our way along the tracks and on both sides of the string of cars. Knowing what was the trouble, they were trying to locate the car with the uncoupled airbrake, and those wise shacks had a pretty good idea just about where the accident had occurred. So we decided to clear out before they found us, which surely they would do when they found what car was disconnected. We jumped and made a run for it, right through the heart of the town. I made straight down the cluttered freight yards, with my long-legged bamboo pole friend puffing along behind me, a poor second. We got away, but a town "bull" nabbed the guy who had caused the trouble—which did not matter much, for he was a Mexican or some ivory-complexioned degenerated hombre of the Latin race.

We did not linger in Tucson at all, under the circumstances. And having successfully eluded the clutch of an Arizona justice of the peace, we continued westward on foot, hitting the railroad again several miles out of town.

The next freight was due to pass us about three in the morning, but it turned out to be a local, and that meant fresh trouble and difficulties for us in more ways than one. In the first place, a local generally makes a stop at every station and side-track, dropping and taking on cars all down the line, much to the annoyance of free-riders. And shacks are omnipresent at all hours. We were certainly put to it hard to keep out of sight while on that local, and that local proved our hoodoo, as all locals are in the mind of a tramp.

Now it was my intention to hop off when we reached the junction point of the Phoenix branch, but, as bad luck would have it, I fell asleep, and when I next awoke we were pulling into Gila, with a desert between me and my original getting-off point. And at Gila the car we were stealing a ride in was side-tracked. Opening the sliding door, which we had all closed, a suspicious shack first thrust a lantern, then his head in and espied the two of us huddled up in one corner of the gloomy car.

"Hy, there!" he yelled. "Unload, you fellows."

I crawled out first, my lanky friend following, mumbling soft instructions to me through the hole in his teeth. In the light of day we must have been a sight, completely covered as we were with a layer of alkali and coal smoot.

"Where you fellows bound for?" inquired the shack, still regarding us sharply. "I was hitting for Phoenix," I returned obligingly, "but I guess I missed connections down the line, snoozing."

He clicked his tongue, as if feeling deeply my bereavement.

"Too bad—too bad!" he clicked. "And that friend of yours—ain't he a beauty for looks! Are you flat?"

I felt the human Bamboo Pole nudge me in the ribs.

"Sure; both of us. Do you think we'd be riding freights if we wasn't roly-poly, see? I'll be looking out for you, and if I catch you it'll be the ditch for the two of youse. Get that?" He made a signal with his lantern and disappeared down the track in the dark. The fireman ahead gave two toots of the whistle, and it looked like we were going to be left for fair. I would have preferred to have gone back in the direction of Phoenix, but I certainly did not want to be marooned in Gila, not even over night.

After a hasty parley, my long-legged friend and me decided to take a chance, and we crawled into another empty. But it was open war from them on. We were finally caught and kicked off in the heart of the Gila desert just as the red ball of a scorching sun, hot even at day-break, was creeping over a jagged-toothed range of low-lying mountains in the distance.

It was a criminal act, dumping us off in a desert like that, without food or water, and I think answerable to the law. But there we were, nevertheless, miles from nowhere and in the blazing heart of a simmering hell, which would soon turn into a sweeping, blanketing holocaust of solar fire—and helpless!

By 10 o'clock we began to feel the first suffering effects of the terrible heat. Two hours more and we were almost dead, staggering, light of head, reeling of brain, with our tongues swelling and unable to articulate above a whisper. But we kept on going as long as we were able to lift one foot after the other, back in the direction of lost Gila and hoping that a train of some kind would come along in time to save us.

My long-legged friend began to babble and talk out of his head. He saw lakes and rivers everywhere, and ran after them. And it was the running about in that awful rain of heat which finally got him in a weak spot—his already shriveled and punctured lungs. I tried to reason with him, and we fought. I got away from him, retreating every time he made for me, his long arms fanning the hot air and his eyes blood-shot, idiotic and staring. He was plum loco. And so was I—almost. I had queer fits of anger. I wanted to kick him; to seal up his babbling, sputtering, silly mouth. He got on my nerves.

At last he collapsed of his own stupendous exertions, sinking down like a shapeless sack of salt between the blistering rails of the railroad track. Then followed a hemorrhage of the lungs—for, poor fellow, he turned out to be a "lunger" in the last stages. He had contracted the "bugs" while an inmate of the state prison of Colorado, dropping and taking on cars all down the line, much to the annoyance of free-riders. And shacks are omnipresent at all hours. We were certainly put to it hard to keep out of sight while on that local, and that local proved our hoodoo, as all locals are in the mind of a tramp.

I had the strength to go on, but I did not. I sat down near the prostrate figure of my nameless friend of the Open Road, and waited. About mid-afternoon a passenger picked us up, and at Gila my long-legged friend died. The town authorities buried him in a 6-foot hole in the desert at the edge of the city limits.

Learning that a stage was soon leaving for Phoenix, I bought a ticket and started for the territorial capital, leaving three dollars with the town marshal to buy my dead friend a clean shirt and other sartorial frivolities to be buried in.

"What was his name?" asked the marshal of me.

"Oh—Reginald Algernon Van Stevedore DeWitt Kauffman, I think it was," I said. "But if you had asked him his handle before he died I guess, out of habit, he would have said No. 1799—or something like that."

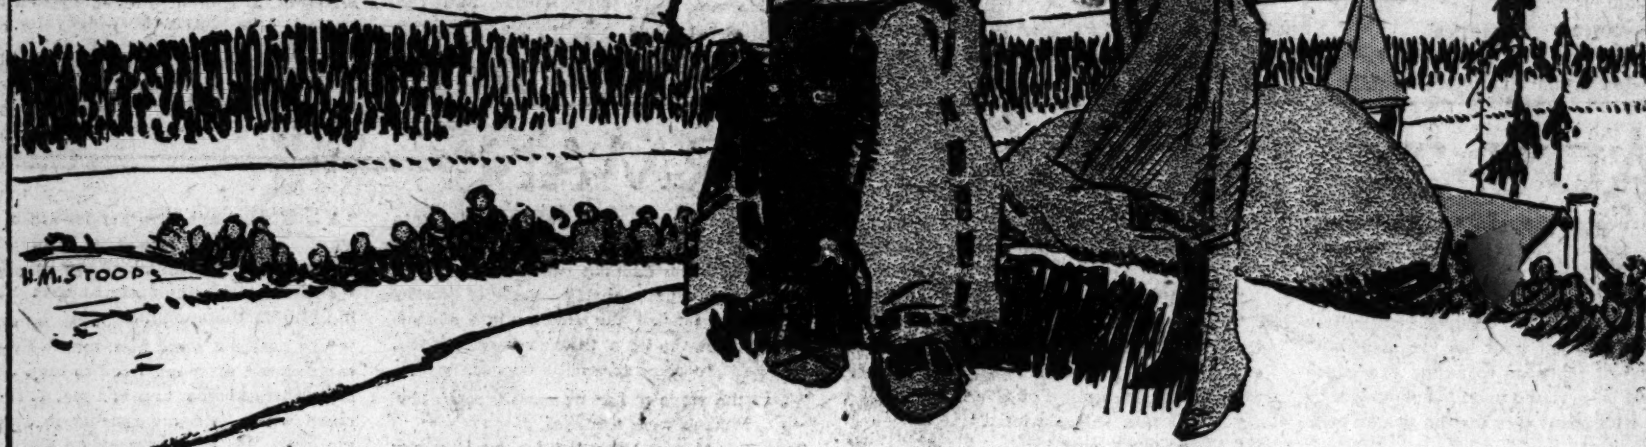

Now, that I think of it, it sounded a bit rough on my friend; but I did not mean it as a joke against Mr. Bamboo Pole. Rather, I meant my humor to be a sort of yelled anathema against the world at large. Some of the iron had entered my soul, and that experience of mine in the desert, with Long-Legs as a companion, had had its callousing effects on the finer sensibilities of my nature. I was beginning to look upon all men as more or less my sworn foes. But—if there was a God, then one day that shack who ditched me and Mr. Bamboo in a desert would scorch in a hell hotter than sands in which only scorpions and side-winding rattlers could live. And he would know what real thirst meant!

"He was built on the sectional joint plan of an animated bamboo pole."

Said the Lady to Larry O'Gorman by Holman Day

"That plan—it means she marries Tomah Danah? I have no ears for such a plan, mam'selle. No!"

Young Mr. Lochinvar Fares Forth to Find That It's Not Such a Cut and Dried World, After All language. I hope what you're saying isn't too impolite!"

It was evident that the talk had something to do with the probable whereabouts of the fugitive daughter. The governor ordered the canoe men to run the craft ashore.

Esther scrambled to her feet and fled around the screen of alders. Tomah was seated with his back against a big tree and he had taken the girl in his arms and she was looking up into his face while he talked to her.

"Thank heaven for that, anyway—though I don't know how much time he has been wasting!" muttered Esther, hurrying toward them. "And now it's all ending just when it's beginning!"

The lovers rose when they saw her. Tomah kept his arm about Zariona's waist. He did not remove the arm when the courier warned, "Your father!"

Esther turned from them and ran toward the governor when he marched into view from behind the alders. Her arms were outstretched as if to bar his way. One of the canoe men at the governor's heels grinned; probably, as a woodsman, he saw in this frantic damsel a comical imitation of a hen partridge venturing all in order to protect her young.

"You must listen to me, Gov. Nicolin! I know that he is a fine and noble young man." "You know, eh? How long you know him?" inquired the governor, trying to avoid this defendant, who danced to and fro in front of him.

"His looks show what he is—his looks are enough!" insisted Esther. "You don't dare to say that he is not good."

The governor stopped and held up his forefinger. "All I say about Tomah Danah is this: He is not the one I have picked to be the husband for my girl. And my business is no business of yours, mam'selle, whoever you may be."

He was calm again and stoically true to race; that calmness and a certain menacing reserve had more effect on Esther's mercurial nature than any wordy blustering that would have matched her own methods of attack. He looked past her and addressed Tomah.

"I have told you that you could not have my girl, eh?" "Yes."

"Take your hand from her."

The lover obeyed.

"Zariona, here! Come here!"

She went slowly, her arms across her eyes, stumbling along the rough ground.

"We understand, Tomah Danah. We are men. We must not let a girl be foolish and shame her home and make a father break his word. I am your governor. If I don't command my home, I cannot set example for the people. You understand. You obey. You are man like me!"

Miss Esther listened closely and surveyed all the details of this exposition of tribal authority, this surrender by supreme command, this "understanding" between men. There was grief in her eyes, there was a wrinkle of disgust across her pretty nose, there was a curl of indignation at the corners of her red lips.

"Men!" she scoffed. "You are breaking a poor girl's heart, and you're all swelling up as if you were proud."

Zariona was passing; Esther reached out and snatched the maiden into a close embrace.

After a little while the protectress lifted wet eyes and regarded the somber father over the daughter's shoulder. "Won't you listen to any reasons why you shouldn't do this awful thing?"

"It is not an awful thing for a girl to have a good home and a kind husband, mam'selle. Tomah Danah, who stands there, knows that he has not a roof over his head, nor a foot of land and no money in the bank. Some day, if he stays a good boy, he will have land and house and can choose a fine girl."

"If it's only money—listen to me—I have money!"

"Yes? Use it for yourself and among your own kind, mam'selle," retorted the governor, his pride touched.

He shoved his arm between Esther and Zariona and took his daughter along with him when he strode away.

This contemptuous rudeness shuttled Esther's impulsive nature back to anger again. "One moment!"

Nicolin halted.

"When does this wonderful wedding take place?" "This foolish girl ran away on the day set for the wedding. So it will be for tomorrow night, before the priest in the chapel at Pattagamon."

The governor met her flaming gaze with the dignity of one who had triumphed.

"Where is Pattagamon?"

He pointed his finger. "Ten miles down the river."

Esther caught the sullen eye of Docite Carrievau and bobbed a curtsy that was a mere flash of deference. "I was wrong when I disputed your opinion of me, monsieur! I am cheeky! For I'm inviting myself to your wedding, Governor Nicolin, may I come?" "It is for all, mam'selle! Our village is open. The word has gone out!"

"You're not wonderfully cordial, but I thank you for the invitation just the same." She put away her air that was half mockery, half defiance. "I don't really mean to be disrespectful or flippant, sir." She hastened to the girl and folded Zariona's trembling hands between consoling palms. "I'll come to your wedding, dear!" she faltered.

After the sullen canoe had departed Esther sat down under the big tree and surveyed Tomah Danah. He stood for a time and gazed straight away at a distant loom of the mountain range, as if his simple nature found a steady influence in the contemplation of the serene heights.

Larry O'Gorman came whistling down the trail, followed by his men on their way back for other loads. Esther rose and advanced to the boat.

"Mr. O'Gorman, may I hire Tomah for the rest of the day? I must get back to the hotel."

Mr. O'Gorman searched all the surrounding landscape with his eyes and then looked up into the heavens as if in search of a maiden who might have acquired wings during his absence.

"Something wicked has happened. Her father is the governor of the Tarratines and he has come and taken her away with him."

"You may have Tomah, miss! And so the old man took the collier!"

"Yes, sir. She is to be married tomorrow evening to a man named Docite Carrievau." Larry had pulled off his hat when he had seen Miss Esther coming toward him. He slapped it back on his head. Then he took it off and bit into the brim.

"Marry-mar-mar-mar!" he growled, worrying the hat, pulling his head from side to side. "Marry Canuck Carrievau—that horn-snouted old parakeet of a Quedaw? Two wives-a-ready has he had—and one of 'em was the collier he stole when he told her I'd been sluiced on the snubbing-slope at Misery Gore. Why he—"

He put on his hat. "Excuse me, miss. I'm going down and express myself to your kingfisher sitting on the popple stub. He'll understand! He has a way of language of his own when he dives and misses his minnow."

Boss O'Gorman hurried away.

Esther went to the Indian. "Tomah, Mr. O'Gorman says you may go as my guide."

"Yes!"

"You may walk on, Tomah, and get the canoe ready. I'll follow you in a moment."

She walked to meet the returning boss. "I feel better, miss, but only a bit! What I have said to the bird has been raw and rough and only in my own poor way on the spur of the moment."

"I feel exactly as you do, Mr. O'Gorman! I endorse all that you said to the fish-bird!" "Thank you, miss!" But Mr. O'Gorman's memory of what he had been saying caused him to shift his eyes from hers in considerable confusion.

"But of what use is talk?" Indignation surged up in the girl. "Men only talk these days! They take it out in talk! They allow talk to kill all the spirit that's in them. That old governor talked to Tomah—and Tomah wilted. O, for the spirit of young Lochinvar!"

"Yes'm," meekly agreed Boss O'Gorman, though he had not the least glimmer of knowledge about this Lochinvar person. But he had a standing of his own to preserve in the estimation of this sophisticated young lady from the city. "I make so bold as to say that the lad would know what to do."

"In his case talk would be of some use, Mr. O'Gorman! One word to him and such a dreadful sacrifice of a sweet girl would not happen."

Esther ran away. "Isn't it a pity that Lochinvar hasn't a hand in this affair, Mr. O'Gorman? I'd say a word to him and he'd be the man for me," she called over her shoulder.

Larry wrinkled his forehead and narrowed his eyes and watched her out of sight, rubbing his ear. Nils Upping came trudging down to dip a drink of water from the stream.

"It sounds like a Squarehead name," pondered Larry. "Hi, Nils, who's Lochinvar?" "Ay ban tank I don't know dat feller, sir!"

A few tallenders of the crew were loading themselves at the pile. The boss noted that they represented a fair assortment of nationalities and he went to them and asked whether anybody in the gang knew Lochinvar. All shook their heads.

But the matter of the identity of this Mister Lochinvar, spoken of so highly by a young city lady who undoubtedly knew what she was talking about and who needed such an agent in her business, had become an obsession in the case of Larry O'Gorman by the time he had finished his supper and was settled on the deck seat with his pipe going full blast.

"Who knows a laddyback, name o' Lochinvar?" he shouted.

"The braw laddy, Lochinvar!" scoffed old Angus Bain. "Next I'll hear, will be somebody speerin' who is Jock o' Hazeldean?"

"If you know aught, Old Oatmeal Cake, out with it!"

"Why, there's a fine bit of portry about the young Lochinvar," the red-headed cookiee shouted, with the haste of youth to display superior knowledge.

"Ay, by Sir Walter's ain hand 'tis writ," said old Angus.

"I've been too busy with me own poems to bother me head about the scribbles of others," stated Larry, defending his lack of general information. "Cookiee, you have a memory for my songs—your head and your mouth are full of 'em. So be, do ye know the jingle by the other pote?"

"Sure! I used to speak it for a piece in school."

"Set your feet on the dancing block and sluice," commanded the boss.

The cookiee took his place and pitched his voice in a shrill monotone, staring up at the camp rafters.

"Ow, young Lochinvar is come out of the west."

Through all the wide border his steed was the best,

He rode all alone—and he—

The cookiee gulped and paused and rolled his hands in his apron.

"He rode all alone—and he rode all alone—"

"Try a new needle!" a helpful friend advised.

"There's a gouge in your record," suggested another satirist from a dark corner.

Angus Bain rose and beat his fist down on his palm. His face was ridged by the furrows of indignation. "U'ts sacrilege!" he shouted. "Nowt else!"

"Well, then, kiss it with your mouth—and let's have it!"

"I hae too much veneration for the bard to keep his noble lines in my noodle—along wi' the tiliyvally sculch thot's aye yammered in my ears."

"Ye're not now making reference to aught that the lad has sung of my songs past-back, eh?" was Larry's baleful query.

"'Tis was not in my throat, sir!" But old Angus blinked hard and looked away.

"I'm glad it was not. I'd be losing me respect for the caution of a Scot, that's always the boast o' the tribe o' ye! D'ye know this Lochinvar, that's the poigt?"

"Eh! The braw laddy! Who does not know? Though I canna tirl the varse—"

"Never mind the varse! It's not so much! As it was funning it's not half a pome, without a chorus. The story, man! The story! I have need of it. Waste no words!"

O'Gorman was on his feet, wagging his forefinger with the threatening violence that always drove his men to quick action.

"Then ye shall hae it! The laird o' Netherby was making sair fash for young Lochinvar—for the laird was giving his dochter to a coggin knave o' nae guid. Into the wedding at the laird's hall came young Lochinvar, and he saw the tears in the lassie's een, and he spied the carle of a Himmer who was waiting for the lily white hand o' her, and then the lad gave her a touch on the arm and a word in her ear—"

"Now I remember," piped the cookiee—but O'Gorman made a vicious palm sweep that sent the boy ducking.

"On with the yarn, Angus!"

"And awa' he flew wi' her on his lightsome naggle, and all the swankie chasers couldna fall foul o' them, and so they lived happy aye after!"

"There! There ye have it!" proclaimed O'Gorman. "The way it should be, and a happy end."

"Won't you let me speak off what I remember, now that I have had the jog?" implored the cookiee, taking advantage of the boss's enthusiasm.

"Ye may!"

"There was racing and chasing on Cannobie lee,

But the lost bride of Netherby ne'er did they see.

So daring in love and—tum-tum—in war, Have ye e'er heard of gallant like young Lochinvar?"

The boss crawled into his bunk and lulled himself to sleep by muttering the last lines.

"And so that's what she had in her mind when she said the word to me, eh?"

The cookiee's morning song while he rattled the pane in the dingie fayed with O'Gorman's waking dreams.

"—and sure I bent me knee,

'Cause I do whate'er a ladie says when she says a thing to me."

His men found much abstraction in the manner of Larry O'Gorman all the forenoon. But when Esther marched down the carry path just before noon O'Gorman came out of his preoccupation. Tomah walked behind her, carrying a canoe on his shoulders like a tortoise bearing its shell. And he was exhibiting a tortoiselike sluggishness in his gait.

"Of that young Lochinvar ye were speaking!" exploded Larry. "So daring in love and a divil in war—ye were right about him, miss."

But the maiden showed no interest in the hero she had vaunted the day before. Her forehead was puckered with a frown. She broke in on O'Gorman impatiently. "I want to go to the wedding of Zariona Nicolin. I have been invited. I'm taking along Mrs. Jocelyn." She directed Larry's attention to a matron, whom he had not noticed in his

"For 'tis all about the ladie fair who strowed across the green:
Most bewitchful ladie fair 'twas ever, ever seen!
Says she to me: 'O, bow ye down!' And sure I bent my knee;
'Cause I do whate'er a ladie says when she says a thing to me."
—By Larry O'Gorman, the Woods' Post.

AMONG the attentions humbly paid to Miss Esther Virabell by Boss Larry O'Gorman of the depot camp of the Great Telos company, he introduced what he considered as special compliment by obliging the red-headed cookiee to render a ballad—fifteen verses, in addition to the sample which opens this tale. The song is very popular all up and down Wild river.

Young Miss Esther, though she was plainly not at all set up in her own estimation, was entitled to elaborate deference, in Mr. O'Gorman's opinion; she was of the Virabell family, who owned much stock in the Great Telos.

For three days, now, she had been coming down the river from the big hotel as if possessed by a lively interest in the work of Boss O'Gorman's crew of fifty "busters" who were toting supplies around the Big Carry. Such attention to affairs was understandable and excusable in one of the Virabell family. But if Mr. O'Gorman was any kind of an observer—and he thought he was—the pretty young colleen from the city had something on her mind, outside of supply toting.

As for Miss Esther's guide—there certainly was something on that guide's mind! It was no ordinary guide, the one who paddled the canoe daily to the pullout near the camp. That guide was a handsome young girl from the Tarratine tribe—and Boss O'Gorman had never seen her on the river before.

Miss Virabell was showing uncommon interest in her guide and in young Tomah Danah as well, a Tarratine who was a member of O'Gorman's crew. But it was a question in the puzzled Mr. O'Gorman's mind which was exhibiting the more woeful countenance, the Indian maid or the stalwart Tarratine.

The boss had discovered early that Esther was an impetuous and impulsive young lady, and he possessed a sentimental nature and it suggested that she was fostering a romance in this adopting "a couple of Injuns for summer pets," as his thoughts put the case. He pried a bit, and Esther frankly confessed that she considered "Zariona, a dear whom anybody must love."

But Miss Esther's impulsiveness did not lead her to inform Boss O'Gorman of certain facts which she had gleaned by keeping vigorously at a problem in which her sympathy had been enlisted. On the third day at the depot camp Esther resolutely decided to act on the knowledge she had been able to gather—knowledge that explained the heart broken demeanor of the girl.

She knew that Zariona was the daughter of Gov. Eusep Nicolin of the Tarratines—that she was a fugitive from her home on a queerly named island and had come out into the world to earn a way for herself and to escape hook-nosed Docite Carrievau, the habitant farmer, chosen for a husband by paternal will, and had come to the big hotel who might be willing to hire an Indian girl. Taking advantage of the exile's upheaved emotions, Miss Esther had "jumped" that much of confession out of Zariona. But the reticent maid of the Tarratines would not confess that she had come into the territory of the Great Telos company to find Tomah Danah. Miss Esther had borne down hard on that point, avidly seeking an opportunity to bring to flower the bud of a romance.

"No, mam'selle!" Zariona had insisted over and over.

"O, have it your own way, but I know better, my dear! I saw the look he gave you—that was enough, really! But the look you gave him—that settled it with me. I'm going to call him right over here—and if I have to tell him what to do, I'll tell him."

But after Miss Virabell had expressed with herself great intrepidity, the Indian boy stood like a stick.

"To look at the two of you, one would think I'm your Governor Nicolin, glowering here with a war club behind my back," she declared. "But I'll turn right around and you'll see there's no club. And now that I'm turned around I'll walk off, leaving you to yourselves, showing you that I'm not an old, foolish father, thinking only of money, money, money!"

She marched away. "I hope," she said to herself, "that Indians know how to talk to each other when there's no paleface nigh to hear 'em."

Esther had seized an opportunity when the crew had gone up the carry trail with burdens; she had dropped a hint to the boss, and Tomah had been left behind to sort supplies.

She went and sat behind some alders that bordered the sullen pool at the foot of the Big Carry. When the canoe came into view from down river, rounding a wooded curve, she was annoyed; the tête-à-tête that her complacent guardianship was protecting would be disturbed. It was a big canoe, of birchbark, and there were paddlers at bow and stern. Two passengers were seated amidship. She noted curious markings on the bow, thinking that they were mere ornaments, lacking the knowledge that would inform her that this was the sachem canoe of the Tarratines, bearing the totem of the tribal chief.

But though Esther was not up on tribal totems, she had a keen sense for identities, and a few words had been dropped by Zariona in the way of description. As soon as the canoe came closer to her—the paddlers taking advantage of the eddy drift by keeping close to the shore—she perceived that one of the passengers had a hooked nose, and her dislike for that person was immediate and instinctive. His companion was an elderly Indian, but he wore a hard hat and a butterfly bow and store clothes and, therefore, distinctly affronted Esther's conception of the fitness of things in that north country, where Indians ought to match the scenery in picturesqueness, she told herself. Her mental assertion was that an Indian who called himself a governor instead of a chief would be just the sort to wear into the woods the air of dignity expressed by a bowler hat.

"What's the world coming to? And I'm not the least bit afraid of him in that rig!" she declared, her sole auditor a kingfisher who had just swallowed a minnow and who agreed with her by a cheerful rattle of "whirr-r chir-r-r!"

But her heart was beating fast. "If he had feathers on his head, like you, fish-bird, instead of his ridiculous hat, I'd never dare even to squeak at him, romance or no romance! But now—"

When the canoe was abreast where she sat she raised her voice. There was a bit of a quaver in her tone, but her eyes were on the reassuring hat. "Pardon me! Are you Gov. Eusep Nicolin?"

He did not as much as touch a finger to that hat when he said "Yes!" She was searching for something with which to prop her courage; quick resentment helped her a lot. The paddlers halted, fanning the ash blades to keep the canoe steady.

"I suppose you are up here looking for your daughter!" Miss Virabell lifted her chin and strove to present the most approved air of aristocratic hauteur, as she conceived it.

"Yes!" This governor was a blunt person!

Esther decided to be blunt along with him. "I have to inform you, sir, that I have engaged your daughter as my guide for—well, for all the time I expect to remain at the Wild River house. Some weeks, probably."

The hook-nosed man addressed the father with a rapid sputter of patois.

Miss Esther interrupted. "I understand even that kind of French perfectly, sir. And I am not a cheeky, silly fool! I am talking to Gov. Nicolin. Sir, do you refuse to allow your daughter to remain with me?"

"Yes."

"Won't you please let her stay?"

"No!"

"But she is my guide—I must get back up river—"

"My daughter is not a guide!"

"I tell you that I have hired her!"

The governor's black eyes glittered. Miss Virabell found that even a Tarratine could talk when his anger drove him into speech. "You listen to me! You talk foolishness. My girl has run away from her good home. She has shamed me and herself. Do you hide her? Where?"

"But I'm not hiding her," said Esther, intimidated. This Indian certainly had plenty of fury, though he lacked feathers.

"It will be bad for anybody who hides her. She is to be married. This is Docite Carrievau, the man for her."

Esther's resentment touched a road to her courage once more. "You ought to know better than to marry off a dear young girl to an old man!"

Gov. Nicolin opened his mouth, but he shut it. He swapped a long stare with the hook-nosed man. Then he growled away in a language that was not French.

"I suppose that is Tarratine talk," commented Esther with all the serenity she was able to muster. "I don't understand that

THE VICTORY AT SEA

By Admiral William Sowden Sims

Too much praise cannot be given to the commanders of our troop convoys and the commanding officers of the troop transports, as well as the commanders of the cruisers and battleships that escorted them from America to the western edge of the submarine zone. The success of their valuable services is evidence of a high degree not only of nautical skill, judgment and experience, but of the admirable seamanship displayed under the very unusual conditions of steaming without lights while continuously maneuvering in close formation. Moreover, their cordial co-operation with the escorts sent to meet them was everything that could be desired.

On the whole, the safeguarding of American soldiers on the ocean was an achievement of the American navy. Great Britain provided a slightly larger amount of tonnage for this purpose than the United States, but about 82 per cent of the escorting was done by our own forces. The cruiser escorts across the ocean to France were almost entirely American, and the destroyer escort through the danger zone was likewise nearly all our own work. And in performing this great feat, the American navy fulfilled its ultimate duty in the war. The transportation of these American troops brought the great struggle to an end. On the battlefield they acquitted themselves in a way that aroused the admiration of their brothers in the naval service. When we read, day by day, the story of their achievements, when we saw the German battle lines draw nearer and nearer to the Rhine, and, finally, when the German government raised its hands in abject surrender, the eighteen months' warfare with the German submarines, in which the American navy had been privileged to play its part, appeared in its true light—as one of the greatest victories against the organized forces of evil in all history.

Besides transporting American troops, the navy, in one detail of its work, actually participated in warfare on the western front. Though this feature of our effort has nothing to do with the main subject, the defeat of the submarine, yet any account of the American navy in the war which overlooks the achievements of our naval batteries on land would certainly be incomplete. The use of naval guns in war operations was not unprecedented; the British used such guns in the Boer war, particularly at Ladysmith and Spion Kop, and there were occasions in which such armament rendered excellent service in the Boer rebellion. All through the world war British, French and German frequently reinforced their army artillery with naval batteries. But, compared with the American naval guns, which, under the command of Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, performed such telling deeds against the retreating Germans in the final phases of the conflict, all previous employment of naval guns on shore had been less efficient.

Big Bertha's Work.

For the larger part of the war the Germans had had a great gun stationed in Belgium bombarding Dunkirk. The original purpose in sending American naval batteries to France was to silence this gun. The proposal was made in November, 1917, but rapidly as the preparations progressed, the situation had entirely changed before our five 14-inch guns were ready to leave for France. In the spring of 1918 the Germans began the great drive which nearly took them to the channel ports, and under the conditions which prevailed in that area it was impossible to send our guns to the Belgian coast. Meanwhile they had stationed a gun, having a range of nearly 75 miles, in the forest of Compiègne; the shells from this weapon, constantly falling upon Paris, were having a more demoralizing effect upon the French populace than was officially admitted.

The demand for the silencing of this gun came from all sides; and it was a happy coincidence that, at just about the time when this new peril appeared, the American naval guns were nearly ready to be transported to France. Encouraged by the success of this long-range gun on Paris, the Germans were preparing long bombardments on several sections of the front. They had taken huge guns from the new battle cruiser Hindenburg and mounted them at convenient points in order to bombard Dunkirk, Calais-sur-Marne and Nancy. In all, our intelligence department reported that sixteen rifles of great caliber had left Kiel in May, 1918 and that they would soon be trained upon important objectives in France. For this reason it was welcome news to the allies, who were deficient in this type of artillery, that five naval 14-inch guns, with mountings and ammunition and supply trains, were ready to embark for the European field. The navy received an urgent request from General Pershing that these guns be landed at St. Nazaire; it was to be their main mission to destroy the "Big Bertha" which was raining shells on Paris, and to attack especially points especially railroad communications and the bridges across the Rhine.

The initiative in the design of these mobile railway batteries was taken by the bureau of ordnance of the navy department, under Rear Admiral Ralph Earle, and the details of the design were worked out by the officers of that bureau and Admiral Plunkett. The actual construction of the great gun mounts on the cars, from which the guns were to be fired, and of the specially designed cars, the supply trains for each gun, was an engineering feat which reflects great credit upon the Baldwin Locomotive Works and particularly upon its president, Mr. Samuel M. Vauclain, who undertook the task with the greatest enthusiasm.

Advantage of Mobile Guns.

The reason why our naval guns represented a greater achievement than anything of a similar nature accomplished by the Germans was that they were mobile. Careful observations taken of the bombardment of Dunkirk revealed the fact that the gun which it was being done was steadily losing range. This indicated that the weapon was not a movable one, but that it was firmly implanted in a fixed position. The 75 miles gun was being employed. The answering weapon which our ordnance department now proposed to build was to have the ability to travel from place to place—to go to any position to which the railroad system of France could take it. To do this it would be necessary to build a mounting and to supply cars which could carry the crews, their sleeping quarters, their food and ammunition; to construct, indeed, a whole train for each separate gun. This equipment must be built in the United States, shipped over three thousand miles of ocean, landed at a French port, assembled there and started on French railroads to the several destinations at the front. The Baldwin Locomotive Works accepted the contract for constructing these mountings and attendant cars; it began work February 18, 1918; two months afterward the first mount had been finished and the gun was being proved at Sandy Hook, New Jersey, and by July all five guns had arrived at St. Nazaire and were being prepared to be sent forward to the scene of hostilities. The rapidity with which this work was completed furnishes an illustration of American manufacturing genius at its best. Meanwhile Admiral Plunkett had collected and trained his crews; it speaks well for the morale of the navy that, when news of this great operation was first noised about, more than 20,000 officers and men volunteered for the service.

SAID THE LADY TO LARRY O'GORMAN

absorption in Miss Virabell. "But Tomah says he cannot guide us beyond here."

The young Indian had set down the canoe. "Why do you tell her that, Tomah Danah?" demanded the boss.

"I must work for the Great Telos."

"I give ye the day off!"

"I cannot go to Pattagamon," declared the Indian.

Larry turned to Esther. "You'll have a guide to take you to the wedding, never ye fear. I order ye to go, Tomah Danah!"

"I cannot go."

"Who is bossing this crew, me man?"

The Indian shifted his gaze from the scowling overlord to the ground, after a lingering and piteous appeal with his eyes.

"Please, will you walk aside with me for a moment, Mr. O'Gorman?" Esther invited. "Of course you understand why he doesn't want to go, sir," said Esther when the two were out of earshot.

Larry expressed himself promptly as to Tomah's quality as a Lochinvar.

"O, that's not it!" declared the girl discomfitedly. "There's no more of that spirit left in this cut and dried world. I'm not dragging him down there to make him reckless or miserable. But I have something to say to Governor Susep Nicolin. I'm hoping that I'll find him in a more reasonable state of mind. I need Tomah with me when I talk."

"I'm always strong meself to play a hunch, miss."

"I don't dare to explain my plan to Tomah just yet, Mr. O'Gorman. I'm finding Indians such obstinate creatures!" she complained.

Mr. O'Gorman fondled his ear. He had discovered, according to his own appraisal of the situation, a great deal of significance in the earnest stare she was giving him.

"But I must have your help, Mr. O'Gorman. You understand!"

"I have a wit of me own that has never gone back on me in a pinch," admitted Larry complacently. "I'm on! Bless ye, I'm in, too! Lave it to me!"

Esther was bewildered by this headlong spirit of cooperation.

"We have come to an understanding, and I take the main burden on myself. When a lady has used her head, it's for a man to use his hands. Niver ye fear! And I have reasons of me own."

In spite of her efforts to receive O'Gorman's proffer of aid with thankfulness, Esther's manner showed doubt instead of relief.

"Mum's the word, miss. I'm no hand to peer and pry. A lady must needs save her face—and annoy word that it was connived shall ne'er bring a blush to ye!"

"Just what do you mean, Mr. O'Gorman?" stammered the girl.

The boss pointed to Tomah. "I mane I'll handle him."

Then Miss Virabell did show distinct relief. Of such was her quest; it was the service that she required from this master of men.

"O, now we understand each other, Mr. O'Gorman!"

"I'll handle him according to your own taste! You have hinted on the thing in only a genteel, lady way, but I know what is wanted. I'll manage him."

"You're one after my own heart, Mr. Mr. O'Gorman!"

"But whisht! It must be after my own way!"

He stepped a few paces away from her and called: "Here, Angus Bain!"

The Scotchman, who was toiling up the trail, laid down his burden and advanced. "I lay ye off the job, my man, till ye guide the ladies to Pattagamon and the return."

"But—" Esther raised protesting hands.

"No better talk than Angus on the river, miss, with the ash breeze! And ye can swap with him all the talk ye will about Lochinvar, because Angus knew the lad well."

"But I need Tomah!"

"Ye'll sure have him, miss, all in good time! But the whisht must be held! Ye must step lightly. I have known the trick ever since I kicked the froth of the Racing Horse into a bubble and rode ashore on the bulge of it."

He hurried away from her and lifted the canoe upon Angus Bain's shoulders. "On your way, man, for the wedding won't wait."

His tongue running full tilt to the exclusion of all of Esther's efforts to put in a plaintive word, O'Gorman sent the matron and the maiden on their way, showering them with good-bys and good wishes.

"U'ts aye a headstrong mon he is, wi' high conceit of his ancel," Angus ventured to comment. "I'd not trust his judgment—" He broke off in order to adjust the canoe which had been tossed upon his shoulders by the boss with scant care for the guide's comfort.

Esther gasped and slowed her pace with the air of one about to abandon an enterprise.

"His judgment," continued the guide, "on matters connected wi' the grand meen-streelays o' Scotland. But on the ways o' man—and on his opinion o' mesel—as a braw mon wi' a canoe—and in doing the deed he says he'll do, he's toler-rably right!"

The dea ex machina went on with a better display of confidence.

The beauties of the ten miles of placid river below "The Devilbrew," on the way to Pattagamon, interested Mrs. Jocelyn; she and Angus did all the talking; Esther was allowed to busy herself with her thoughts. She was comforted and encouraged in spite of her doubts! Mr. O'Gorman seemed to be sure of himself and of the right way to manage Tomah Danah!

Rounding a great bend in the river, they saw Pattagamon. The thrust of the chapel's steeple from among the willows and from the huddle of the little houses did not suggest to Esther the consolations of religious peace; that spire was a warning finger, like the finger that the governor had raised the day before.

"Here, this night, is to be wedded the daughter of Gov. Nicolin of the Tarratines," the steeple seemed to signal. "Let no middle-class pale face interfere," it warned.

"I'm glad I came," confided Mrs. Jocelyn amiably. "You were lucky to have an invitation that would include me, Esther, dear. It's going to be so picturesque, and such a lovely experience, I'm sure!"

Miss Virabell was not at all sure. But she informed herself that, in spite of his title, Susep Nicolin was only a squatty man who wore ready-made clothes and a hard hat.

Of course, there was his Indian pride, and all that, but he had distinctly stated his reason—his sole and especial reason—why he would not have Tomah Danah as son-in-law. Her plan, so Esther induced herself to believe, would take care of his objection. Talk of the people? Surely there could not be much more talk than had been stirred by a girl's flight on the day set for the wedding! Another postponement, and even another bridegroom, would not make much more opportunity for gossip.

Angus, displaying his ability as a canoe-man, made a gallant sport of the last stage of the journey, for there was a considerable crowd of observers on the shore, near the landing place.

The ranks of the people opened when the canoe surged up to the float with froth at the prow. Gov. Susep Nicolin walked through the press and stood at the edge of the shore, his hands outstretched to assist Esther from the canoe.

But this was Gov. Nicolin in the sash and garb of the Tarratines—the festival dress of his forefathers. The eagle feathers towered from the fillet that bound his hair. Esther stared up at him from the canoe and wondered how it was that he had grown so tall; her eyes were dazzled by the flash of the rays of the setting sun reflected from the cuirass of his beaded jacket.

"You are welcome to the wedding, mam'selle."

He helped her to step from the canoe; he assisted Mrs. Jocelyn and bowed when Esther stammered an introduction. "All are welcome to Pattagamon today."

The girl instantly realized that if she hesitated, if she waited to weigh the pro and con, if she paused to take full account of stock of this new personage, her cause was lost. She lashed her flagging courage with the limp things of her natural impulsiveness.

"Gov. Nicolin, may I have a few words with you in private?"

He led the way to a knoll and the two of them stood on the crest of it. The people gazed up at them from below.

"It doesn't seem so very private," complained Esther.

"They will not hear."

"Of course, you know it's about Zarlona. That's why I am here. I have a plan."

"That plan—it means she marries Tomah Danah!"

"Yes! But listen!"

"I have no ears for such a plan, mam'selle. No!" He put up his hand.

"But this is business."

"Business at Pattagamon waits till after the wedding! I have given orders. I set the example." He waved his hand, directing her attention to the throng of idlers.

"May I talk with Zarlona?"

"After the wedding."

"Will you not listen to—"

"After the wedding, mam'selle! Now I go. Have much to do." He turned his back on her and started down the mound. The eagle feathers, horrent in his crest and trailing to his heels in a double row, his manner, all his dress, made him something almost unreal, in Esther's new estimate of him. Arguing with that personage seemed to be like trying to beat sense into a picture in a book!

Esther, with all those upturned eyes circling her, was stricken with stage fright. The Indians continued to survey her as if they expected her to make a speech! That embarrassing situation in itself was enough to put a girl to flight! But the thought of the mental torture she would suffer by remaining to behold the poor victim sacrificed to Docie Carrievan was a stronger compelling motive for retreat.

Esther ran down to Angus, who was carefully upturning the canoe on the pull-out rack. "Put it in the water! Come, Mrs. Jocelyn!"

"Come!" echoed the incredulous lady.

"Yes! We're going to start back—at once—back to the hotel!"

Mr. Bain entertained no doubts as to who were his bosses on that day and date—one was present and the other was up the river—and O'Gorman was pever a reasonable man when orders had not been obeyed.

"But it's coming night!" sputtered the matron.

Bain set the canoe upon the water and Esther stepped in.

Angus turned to Mrs. Jocelyn. "Tis the full o' the moon and moonlight aye makes the grand path o' the river. Give me your hand, madam, and step careful!"

Mrs. Jocelyn obeyed orders.

"Esther Virabell, tell me what all this means!" demanded Mrs. Jocelyn as soon as they were on their way.

"I have not one word to say."

"You're getting to be quite an Indian in this new freak of keeping your mouth shut!"

The lurch that Miss Virabell gave the canoe when she swirled around from her seat in the bow to face Mrs. Jocelyn nearly upset the craft. "Don't you dare to intimate to me that I'm like an Indian or want to be like one! I hate the whole tribe! I don't care to spoil the peace of a calm evening by silly gabble, that's all!"

After that robust retort there were no sounds except Angus Bain's rhythmic grunts of effort and the lisp of his paddle blade in the water. Even when the moon rolled its disk of glory into the eastern sky—a spectacle to provoke the usual paean of feminine praise—Mrs. Jocelyn maintained her reproachful silence.

Therefore, in that stillness, those in the canoe could hear sounds from afar. Esther listened for some time to a chorus of men's voices, increasing in volume, coming nearer from up the river.

"If I may make so free as to venture my thought, it's the Busters of O'Gorman's crew, and they're singing one of his come, all-ye's. On to the wedding, most like!" said Angus.

"I don't care to be seen by any rabble of that sort! Turn the canoe to the shore and wait under the shadow!" commanded the girl irritably.

To meet Boss O'Gorman—to venture into the tumult of that oncoming hilarity—to confess that she had not been able to wedge in edgewise one word of her grand plan when she had been face to face with Governor Nicolin! Her cheeks burned while the canoe floated in the blessed shadows. Thinking on Governor Susep Nicolin as she had seen him last, pondering on her puny efforts at meddling, Esther quite convinced herself that she had been going through an attack of mid-summer madness; that she was sane once more was proved by her ability to perceive now what a fool she had been making of herself and by her determination to mind her own business from then on, she decided.

But as was sure down the middle of the moonlit river. Men were crowded into boats and the blades of the sweeping oars tossed up the flashing water. A voice, which was unmistakably that of Larry O'Gorman, bawled the singers into silence.

"I'll give ye the lilt o' the new walse, meself, and ye're to come in on the chorus."

"Ow, the ways o' her were all ginteel, tho' rogulsh were her eyes."

Says she to me, 'The lad for me, 'tis e'er the lad who tries!'

Says I to her, 'Twill sure be done! Fair maid, I bow my knee,'

And I do what'er a ladde says when she says a thing to me."

Then came the call for "chorus!"

"Whoop, all good men, and mind your step when'er the ladies say!"

So shall ye win the hearts o' them, sing larry down ay day!"

"Paddle on!" commanded Esther when the river was clear again.

"U'ts a gang that kens better what to do at a log jam than at a wedding," averred Angus. "I wonder what's prompting 'em to make so free wi' the merry makings for Nicolin's docther!"

Esther was obliged to stir Mrs. Jocelyn into resentful wakefulness at the Big Carry. The same services were required when Angus put the canoe alongside the float at the Wild River house. He put up a protesting palm when Esther drew her purse. "It's all in the day's work, miss! And a moonlight sail I hae e'er relished from my young days till now."

But she persisted and jammed money into his first. "I will call the watchman and he will provide a bed for you."

"Loch! Naething o' the sort! I relish the first prickings o' daylight as well as I relish the moon. And it's not long, as I paddle down, ere the sun will be in my eye. Good morning to you!"

In the dimly lighted rotunda Esther halted and surveyed Mrs. Jocelyn as if wondering just what to say to the blinking and furious chaperon.

"Esther Virabell, if you think you're going to talk to me now—I warn you."

"I have no notion of talking—I'll even save my apologies till after breakfast, Mrs. Jocelyn."

Esther was considerably surprised when she woke and glanced at her watch and discovered that it was near noon. The purring of the house telephone had awakened her. A voice from the office informed her that a man was waiting. "It's Boss O'Gorman of the Great Telos, Miss Virabell, and he says that the business is important."

Stricken, aghast, apprehensive, Esther faltered a promise to come down as soon as possible.

In the first tumult of her emotions she hurried to attire herself—and then she dived over the final touches, dreading to face what was awaiting her below.

Once more her telephone summoned her. "Beg pardon, Miss Virabell, but an Indian who says he is Governor Susep Nicolin of the Tarratines is waiting."

The young lady would have felt fully justified in pleading indisposition at that moment, but she gasped some sort of a reply and hung up the receiver. She descended by way of the broad stairway, slowly and shrinkingly.

Larry O'Gorman was posted at the foot of the stairs. But instead of the ominous scowl and reproaching words that she expected she was greeted with an ecstatic grin.

"The top o' the morning to ye, after a night o' glory," he cried, sweeping her a bow.

In her uncertainty as to how to meet his expansive joviality she looked past him; saw Governor Nicolin standing in the broad door of the hotel rotunda, a black spot against the streaming sunlight, in the muffle of his store clothes; but his matter of fact garb no longer helped the courage of Miss Virabell. That saturnine visage was distinctly alarming.

"Whisht! Old Big Warwhoop has trailed me here, but don't ye mind him."

"Trailed you?" Visions of the enormities of the warpath flared in the girl's mind.

"Aye! But not by snift and squint as they did in the old days when an Injun was a rale Injun. He followed close at me back after I started for here when Angus had reported to me. And now, when will ye have it, and where will ye have it?"

"Have what?" choked Esther.

"Ah! Your play is the right one!" indorred Larry, cocking a knowing eyebrow.

"A lady must aye save her face in a ginteel way." He laid his forehead beside his nose and winked. "Lochinvar!" he whispered.

Esther stared anxiously at that threatening blur in the sunlight.

"Ye need not mind him, miss! He daren't come closer, after my word to him. We had our understanding, him and me, at the depot camp when he came ranting in there this morning. He may be chief on Pattagamon, but I'm boss on the lands of the Great Telos!" He opened his hand and then slowly closed his big fist. His face dismissed the grin. "Now he knows I'm boss."

But Mr. O'Gorman was not finding in this young lady's countenance that triumphant joy for which he had been looking—not even after he had reassured her in regard to Governor Susep Nicolin's new tractability.

"Sorry the day! You must have guessed, for I don't see how you could have heard. But, mayhap, you'll give me pardon after confession," he went on contritely. "I was taking it all on meself! 'Twas your head for the plans but the hands of meself for the job—and 'twas open and above beca' as all could see the face of me and the mugs o' my boys who were with me. But in tussling with all the Injuns on Pattagamon—in the stir and the whirl of it—you know how a hint may slip o'er the teeth—and the Busters were bound to cheer for 'the colleen o' the city' after 'twas over—and—and—"

"Mr. O'Gorman, what is it—what has been done?"

"Ah! Bless ye, that's it—that's the play to make whilst he's peering and harking! Now I'll go and lie to him and say ye know naught. It'll be all on meself—and that for his law!" Larry snapped a contemptuous finger in his palm.

"But what has been done?" wailed Esther.

"Lochinvar!" insisted O'Gorman. "According to the pome—and I'm strong on the hint in a pome. But we had to tie Tomah Danah's feet to get him down there. He's sure a stubborn jack, and his brain is obdurate to the jog in a good pome. However, we got him to the castle hall—and then we made a bee of the Lochinvar job—and we broke the jam with a clean sweep and took the lad and the lass to a place so snug that all the racing and chasing amounts to naught—and Injuns ain't Injuns to spy the trail no more. And the men who keep company with Tomah and the lass, till we have the word from you, will ne'er give 'em up if all the Tarratines this side o' tophet dig up the tomahawk! Now, where will it be, and when will it be? The word is for you to say."

Esther slumped down on the stairs. She stared up at the amiable blunderhead who was making no account of conveniences or licenses or authority.

"I'll go over to him and tell the lie for your sake," volunteered Larry. "I sure owe ye the payment of a few lies for my letting minton o' you slip into the tumblehop o' the mixup!"

The strength came back to Esther's limbs and the color to her cheeks. She leaped up from the stairs and grasped O'Gorman's hand. Craven enough to desert her champion in that crisis? She stamped upon the mere suggestion of such cowardice when she clicked her heel hard on the polished wood.

"Mr. O'Gorman, I have already told you that you are a man after my own heart!"

"Ah! Ye did so, miss!"

"And you are! I accept all the responsibility for this affair. I'll take charge of it from now on. Will you wait here for me? I'm going to talk to Governor Susep Nicolin, now that I can talk to a man instead of to a bunch of feathers."

She returned past O'Gorman, the somber chief frugging at her heels; she had obtained from the hotel clerk the loan of the private office for a conference.

Larry O'Gorman grabbed Nicolin's arm and detained the Indian with a clutch that sank into the flesh. He spoke low. "Whisht, Susep! You do as the colleen asks you to do. You know the way o' Larry O'Gorman now. And I'm telling ye that if ye don't come out of your pommance it'll be as the pome says: 'The last bride o' Netherby ne'er shall ye see.' This is one time that a pote speaks truth as well as poetry! On with ye! Mind your ways, man!" He shoved the father along at Esther's heels.

Larry sat down on the stairs and waited, his eyes on the door that barred him out.

The clerk came from behind the desk and strolled to the big boss. "You seem to know Miss Virabell pretty well, O'Gorman!"

"O, aye!" returned Larry.

"Special business on today with her?"

"Yes!"

"Well, the women folks are dabbling into affairs—even the young ones—these days. Hope you're standing in well enough to get a boost!" The clerk was then called back to his duties by a guest.

Larry set his elbows on his knees and propped his chin in his hands, never moving his eyes from the closed door.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A YOUNGSTER'S CLOTHES

Mothers Like Rubber Rompers as Well as the Kiddies

How Do You Like My Little Boy's Suit?

CLOTHES mean as much to the little girl as they do to her older sister and mother. It is but another instance of the "eternal feminine." To know that one is fittingly and fashionably clothed at all hours of the long summer day adds much to the happiness of any girl, big or little.

On a summer morning little girls have so much playing to do that it is impossible for them to be bothered with keeping their clothes clean. There is ground to be dug, water to be carried, and mud pies to be made. What little tot would not appreciate a working suit of green rubber on such a busy day?

This rubber suit is a "regular" workman's costume, for fastened to the bloomers is an apron which buttons to straps on the shoulders after the fashion of overalls.

When this little miss takes her doll for a morning call upon her little neighbors, she removes the rubber-rompers and appears in a suit not far different from her small brother's. You see, this season many young ladies are wearing trousers for play and finding them very comfortable indeed. They are made of blue-and-white striped gingham or galatea.

After her nap in the afternoon, she puts on her afternoon dress, which is a very fashionable combination of pink-and-white-checked gingham and white organdie. White rickrack braid edges collar and cuffs, belt and the wide tucks in the skirt.

Naturally, a little girl must have a party dress for the many social affairs which she has to attend. Like her mother, she knows that charming color effects are modish, so she chooses a yellow organdie trimmed simply with bands of blue. The little blue collar and pockets are embroidered in yellow.

Such is a perfect day, according to Fashion, in the life of a youngster's summer clothes.
